U. S. Convoys East Coast Cargo Ships; 5 More Lost

One Vessel Is Sunk Off Virginia, Another 120 Miles From N.Y.; Mines Believed Cause

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy announced last night that it is convoying merchant ships along the Atlantic Coast from Maine to Florida but the day brought word of four and possibly five more sinkings in the western Atlantic.

Official word was issued that a medium-sized United States merchant ship had been sunk by an underwater explosion, presumably caused by an enemy mine, off the Virginia Coast. Survivors, the Navy said, have been landed at an East Coast port.

A short time before, Buenos Aires had announced the sinking of the 4900-ton Argentine freighter Rio Tercero 120 miles out of New York, but Foreign Minister Guinazu said he did not know whether the sinking was caused by a torpedo or a mine. If a submarine was responsible the attack is expected to strain still further the relations between the Axis powers and Argentina, one of the only two American republics still maintaining diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

3 Other Sinkings

From Belem, Brazil, the Associated Press reported the torpedo sinking of the 4954-ton United States ship Columbian and the Panamanian ship Cardinas. At Barbados, British West Indies, the A. P. reported, nine crewmen of an unidentified torpedoed United Nations vessel arrived and were met by the United States consul.

Warship protection of convoys of freighters through the coastal sea lanes was started a month ago and has resulted in a tremendous reduction of submarine attacks in the area patrolled, it was revealed.

Unofficial estimates showed one merchantman sunk in U. S. Atlantic coastal waters during the past month, compared with 14 in the area the month before. The total number of submarine attacks in Western Hemisphere waters, however, increased over the month before.

Extension Likely

The official announcement of this most recent move to combat the Atlantic submarine menace was brief. It read:

"The Navy has been conveying merchant ships through the lanes of the Eastern sea frontier for approximately the past 30 days."

There were indications that the convoy system would be extended to the Gulf of Mexico, the Carribbean and South American waters as soon as antisubmarine craft become available.

It is the lack of such craft that forced merchant shipping until a month ago to travel singly, protected only by their own guns.

Insufficient Vessels

Officials have said that until there are sufficient war vessels for all needs, the available antisubmarine

D. C. Budget Gets Final Approval

The Senate late yesterday approved a conference report on the $56,313,851 District budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, thus completing congressional action on the measure which now will be sent to the President for his signature.

Fire, Crash Keep City Forces Busy

Firefighting apparatus, police cars and ambulances screamed through the streets of downtown Washington last night in response to an auto-bus crash at Scott Circle and a two-alarm fire at 1322 New York Avenue Northwest, headquarters of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In the collision Mohamed A. Sirag-el-Din, 38, commercial attache at the Egyptian Legation, was seriously hurt when his car jumped the dividing strip beneath the circle and hit the bus headon. Six bus passengers suffered minor injuries.

Fireman James E. White, 36, of 9705 Lawson Place, Silver Spring, was overcome at the New York Avenue fire, where the intense heat and dense smoke made it difficult for firemen to get at the blaze, which was confined to the basement of the building.

After Twenty Years

$10,000,000 Teapot Dome 'Pay-Off' Cache Found in N. Y.

By the Associated Press

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday that a 10-million-dollar cache of securities and cash owned by Henry M. Blackmer, who fled the country at the time of the Teapot Dome scandal 20 years ago, had been uncovered in a war-time examination of foreign bank accounts.

The assets, Morgenthau disclosed, were hidden in New York City banks under mysterious names identified only by numbers.

Morgenthau recalled that Blackmer was alleged to have been the "pay-off" man in attempting to obtain the sale of Government oil lands to private oil companies.

Blackmer left the country in 1921, when he was sought as a principal witness against Secretary of the Interior Albert Fall, who was convicted and sent to prison for accepting a bribe in connection with the oil fraud. Blackmer lived in France for a number of years, foiling numerous attempts to extradite him to the United States, and he is believed now to be in Switzerland.

In connection with efforts to uncover resources of Axis agents and sympathizers, the Treasury has been making a systematic search of all assets in this country belonging to persons living abroad. The Blackmer accounts in New York were traced back and finally identified as belonging to him although they did not bear his name.

Accounts Have Been "Frozen"

For the present these accounts have been "frozen." This means that they may not be drawn on without permission from the Treasury.

In addition, Morgenthau ordered an investigation to determine whether Blackmer owes the United States any income taxes or fines that could be collected from these accounts. The Justice and Interior Departments were notified of the discovery for similar reasons.

The Treasury was able to "freeze" Blackmer's accounts because, although still a United States citizen, he had been living in France and can be regarded technically as a "national" of France.

U. S. Maps Health Program; 800 Hospital Beds in Sight

Federal and Municipal Authorities Agree Upon Expansion Plans

Public Health Service Would Receive Control Of Emergency Rooms

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Staff Writer

Nearly 800 additional beds will be made available to relieve hospital overcrowding in the Capital area if preliminary plans agreed upon by District and Federal officials yesterday are finally worked out.

New one-story frame hospitals in nearby Virginia and Maryland counties, an addition to Gallinger and another to the Montgomery County General Hospital, and the construction of nurses' dormitories to make their present quarters available for ward space are called for in the program tentatively approved in the conference between Public Health, Federal Security and Federal Works representatives.

The temporary structures in Arlington will accommodate 150 beds; one planned for Prince Georges County and one for Bethesda will have 100 beds each. The addition to Gallinger will add 250 beds, and one to the Sandy Spring hospital, 25.

The old Thiekeld School at Thirty-sixth and Prospect Streets Northwest will be made over into a nurses' home, allowing 35 patients to occupy the space now used by the nurses. A temporary frame home for nurses will be built at Columbia Hospital, on which a sur-

The Government is about to launch a health program for its estimated 270,000 employes here which will be Uncle Sam's answer to the shortage of doctors and nurses. Briefly, the plan provides that Government emergency rooms be placed under the control and supervision of the Public Health Service; that one doctor be provided for each 5000 employes and that one nurse be available for each 1000 employes. X-rays would be available and each new employe would be required to have his chest examined before he was placed on the job. Employes now in the service would be required to have their chests X-rayed at certain periods. This plan is proposed to keep down the high tuberculosis rate here.

A central psychiatric clinic would be provided. The plan also provided for some visits by the nurses. The health plan was drawn up by Surgeon General Thomas Parran. It has the approval of the Public Health Service; Paul McNutt, who is in charge of defense health and

3 Deputies Would Administer WPB in Proposed New Setup

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Delegation of responsibility for administering the War Production Board to three deputy chairmen to free WPB's chief, Donald M. Nelson, for the vital task of making broad decisions of policy is contemplated under plans for the board's impending "fundamental" reorganization.

If WPB's reorganization goes through in the form now contemplated, it was learned last night, Nelson for the first time will assume a position approximating that of minister of supply in the British system.

One of the deputy chairmanships is slated to go to William L. Batt, who is expected to direct the allocation of raw war materials, continuing as American member of the Combined (American-British) Raw Materials Board and as chairman of the WPB requirements committee.

Under the reorganization plan, J. S. Knowlson would be shifted from his directorship of the Division of Industry Operations to a second deputy chairmanship, in which he would serve as Nelson's alternate on the newly formed Combined Production and Resources Board, the so-called "international WPB," of which Capt. Oliver Lyttleton, the British minister of production, is the top English member.

A third deputy chairmanship also is contemplated, but the man for the task remains to be found. Whoever may be selected for the task, if the reorganization plan finally is adopted, will be respon-

New Approach to Old Problem

New Bill Lets Landlords Oust Roomers With Bad Personality

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

A new psychological approach to Washington's war housing problem was made yesterday by the House District Committee, which approved a bill to permit private home owners to turn out tenants who prove to have objectionable personalities.

Also, under provisions of the bill, a home owner can accept four paying guests and still not be classed as a rooming house operator.

Heretofore, only two roomers were permitted and once the rooms were let the only way to get them back was via the Municipal Court, where homeowners had to prove the roomers "substantial nuisances."

Thousands of rooms have been kept closed to war workers as a result, according to Rent Administrator Robert Cogswell, who told the committee that proving a roomer a legal nuisance is an expensive and often a losing process.

Contrary to the usual testimony, which classifies women as the most objectionable tenants, Cogswell said many men roomers in Washington have turned out to be "people ladies of the house did not want around."

Present Gas Plan to Stand Until July 22

Extra Allowances To Be Available; 'A' Coupon Books Go Out July 9, 10, 11

SCHEDULED MEETING of gasoline dealers to consider closing one-day-a-week postponed to today as Harry Wainwright, secretary, is unable to attend. Page 5.

Another Week

A second postponement of the start of a permanent coupon book system of gasoline rationing in the District and 17 Eastern States—extending the present plan from July 15 to July 22—together with new dates for issuance of ration books, was announced last night by the Office of Price Administration.

Provision was made at the same time for extra allowances to enable holders of temporary ration cards to obtain enough gasoline to run their cars for another week.

The basic A coupon books will be issued on July 9, 10 and 11, rather than on July 1, 2 and 3, as originally planned. Basic D books for motorcycles also will be issued on those dates, OPA said.

Extras Depend on Cards

The size of extra gas allowances will depend on the types of temporary cards motorists now hold. A card holders will be entitled to an additional 3 gallons, while B-1 cards will be good for an extra 4 gallons; B-2 cards for 5 gallons and B-3 cards for 6 gallons.

The war bond seal on the upper left-hand corner of the ration card will be punched by the filling station attendant when the new allowance is purchased. All unpunched units on A and B cards will continue to be good for 6 gallons.

The present temporary rationing plan was extended another week, OPA said, to give motorists more time for organization of car-sharing clubs. In a statement, Price Administrator Leon Henderson emphasized that car owners who have not joined a club by any of the registration dates will have to prove that it was impossible for them to do so before they will be issued "B" or "C" books for supplemental gas rations. "A" books, it was indicated several weeks ago, will be good for about four gallons a week.

Meanwhile, as Congressional quarters predicted that plans for extension of gasoline rationing throughout the Nation would be abandoned, a decision was expected today on proposals that a gasoline-less day be proclaimed for Washington this week.

Urges Forming of Car Clubs

"Car-sharing to make one card do the work of four has become an integral part of the new coupon plan," declared Henderson. "Pooling cars for driving to and from work is imperative for two reasons:

"First, private cars are needed to supplement public transportation, and second, in view of the petroleum shortage in the East, we must

250,000 Paratroops Reported Poised for Invasion of Egypt; Sevastopol Fights On in Streets

Vichy Says Some Of Russian Port's Defenders Have Been Evacuated

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Tuesday), June 23. The Germans renewed their offensive on the Kharkov Front Monday and 400 miles to the south forced Sevastopol's beleaguered garrison to fall back on two sectors, official reports said early today.

The midnight Soviet communique indicated the smashing German attacks against the hard-pressed Crimean naval base continued unabated.

[The gravity of the situation was pointed up by a Vichy dispatch, heard in London by Reuters, which said that street fighting had begun in Sevastopol and that a number of the defenders had embarked on transports. The Germans said officially the entire region above Sewernaja Bay in the north had been cleared with the capture of the lone remaining coastal fort.

Reds Land Reinforcements

["On the rest of the invested front German and Rumanian troops, supported by the Luftwaffe, have assaulted and captured several forts and strongly defended heights," the German communique said.]

[A Stockholm dispatch, quoted by Reuters, said the Red Fleet had succeeded in landing some reinforcements but that these were insufficient to affect the situation.]

The fighting on the Kharkov front had been on a reduced scale for the last few days, with the Russians counterattacking at some points, but the communique said the initiative was again in the hands of the Germans.

"On June 22 our troops on the Kharkov front waged battle against attacking German troops," the high command said.

"On the Sevastopol front fierce battles continued. On other sectors of the front no essential changes took place."

Earlier reports said the Russian defenders of Sevastopol had been thrust back both from the north and south, despite their stubborn resistance which cost the Germans thousands of lives.

Wedge Driven In Lines

Dispatches from the Black Sea bastion said that a huge mass of infantry, tanks and artillery had driven a wedge in the northern fortifications.

On the south, where the Russians had withdrawn to their central lines, a heavy battle was under way for a hill dominating the sector. The Germans tried five times to drive the defenders from the crest, dispatches said, but each assault was turned back by the fire of mortars, machine guns and rifles.

German casualties at Sevastopol have been estimated at more than 100,000, but still the enemy came on with crushing numbers of men

Theirs to Wonder Why

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 22.—The disastrous collapse of Tobruk and the renewed menace of German troops at the Egyptian border provoked a wave of protest in Britain tonight which assured the Churchill government of heavy criticism when Commons reassembles.

The Axis triumph, again menacing Alexandria and Suez, keys to the Middle East and control of the Mediterranean, appeared to have precipitated a political crisis if editorial comments and criticism of members of Parliament and military writers were reliable criteria.

Winston Churchill is in the United States conferring with President Roosevelt, but rightly or wrongly the average Briton links the Prime Minister with British military strategy. Thus he is vulnerable after military defeats.

Clement Attlee, the Dominions secretary, probably will make a statement on the Libyan campaign to the next session of Parliament. But the real fireworks will start when Churchill himself rises to defend the strategy and generals against attacks of such government critics as former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha, Earl Winterton and others.

There was no disposition among members of Parliament to take the fall of Tobruk as coolly as the surrender of Singapore.

Dispatches from correspondents at the front fanned the public anger. A story in Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard called "faulty leadership" one reason for the defeat.

The favored explantion by government spokesmen was that the British, although they had "some" American-made General Grant tanks and "some" new antitank guns, did not have enough to check the Germans. But political experts found such statements deficient in

Sub Shells Dunes Near Oregon Fort

'Too Damned Close,' Commandant Says; No Damage Results

By the Associated Press

Seaside, Oreg., June 22.—A submarine, presumably Japanese and big enough to operate 5000 miles from home, pitched nine shells of an estimated 60 pounds each onto the sand dunes that wrinkle the Oregon coast line from the Columbia River south to this resort town, a survey disclosed today.

In this area is Fort Stevens, sentinel guarding the mouth of the Nation's second largest river. Col. Carl S. Doney, commander of the Columbia River harbor defenses, said some of the shells landed in the proximity of the reservation—"too damned close."

It was the second such shelling on the Western North American coast since Saturday night. Estevan Point on Vancouver Island was shelled Saturday night. It was first presumed that one submarine lofted shells at a Government radio station, but at Ottawa today Defense Minister J. L. Ralston told the House of Commons that two or more enemy submersibles probably participated.

Nobody was injured by the 15-minute Oregon bombardment starting at 11:30 p. m. Pacific War Time, Sunday (2:30 a. m. Eastern War Time today), and no military or civilian structures were damaged, but some of the shells burst within 500 yards of the Jean Hefling farm home.

"I was scared to death," said Mrs. Hefling, and her husband echoed agreement. Three-year-old Donna Jean Hefling fell out of bed in fright but her brother, Keith, 10, wasn't awakened.

The pattern of craters indicated the sub drifted or sailed about three miles during the bombardment.

Reds Will Get Fighting Help, Roosevelt Says

Hopkins Delivers President's Message At New York Rally

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—Harry Hopkins, speaking at a Russian War Relief rally, said tonight President Roosevelt told him to tell the meeting the United States would give Russia aid on the battlefield and that the Russian front would not fail.

Asserting that he had spoken to Mr. Roosevelt a few hours before coming to New York while the President and Prime Minister Winston Churchill were talking "about strategic steps to be taken," Hopkins said the President gave him this message to deliver:

"Tell them that we mean to give Russia aid on the field of battle and that our armed forces will attack at the right time and at the right place, and that the Russian front will not fail."

Hopkins said a second front and, if necessary, a third and a fourth front, would be established to pen up Hitler's armies while the Allied air forces destroyed his cities, one by one.

"The American people have made up their minds," the lend-lease administrator and close adviser of the President said. "Nothing can stop the onward march to overwhelming military victory.

Italy, Hopkins predicted, "led by that fat, almost retired exhibitionist, Mussolini, will collapse like an inflated mushroom under the first stress of a violent attack.

"Once Mussolini wanted Ethiopia—and got it—well, when this war is over if the Italian people do not hang him by his cowardly neck I can only hope that he will be turned over to the tender mercies of the Ethiopian King."

As for Hitler's other major ally, Japan, Hopkins said the Battles of the Coral Sea and Midway were

Navy Tells How Sub Rescued Ill Aussie Fliers From Timor

(Copyright by the Chicago Sun

Two daring submarine officers of the United States Navy slipped their undersea craft through a cordon of Japanese patrol vessels and rescued a group of fever-ridden Australian aviators stranded on the Island of Timor when it was occupied by the Japanese, the Navy disclosed yesterday.

The department said the feat took place last April, and that the two officers, Lieut. Hiram Cassedy of Mississippi, commanding officer of the submarine, and Ensign George Carlton Cook of Massachusetts had been awarded the Navy cross in recognition of their heroism.

The exploit started when it was learned that a number of Royal Australian air force members, emaciated and fever stricken, were stranded on Timor, in the Netherlands East Indies, and Japanese troops were endeavoring to capture them.

Vice Admiral H. F. Leary, commander of Allied Naval forces in the Southwest Pacific area, directed that the airmen be evacuated.

Lieutenant Cassedy's submarine was assigned to the task. While enemy patrol craft ranged the waters off Timor constantly, the American submarine slipped through the vigil undetected and arrived at the island on a night in April.

The Navy said that Ensign Cook swam ashore through the surf and after considerable difficulty and at great personal risk made contact with the Australians. He returned to his ship for a rescue party, led it ashore in a boat and superintended the transfer of the sick and wounded fliers to his vessel. He was called upon to save two of them from drowning en route.

With the aviators aboard, the American submarine again slipped by the Japanese off-shore patrol and carried the airmen to safety.

In citations accompanying the awards Vice Admiral Leary commended Cassedy, who, he said, "under trying conditions and with the utmost persistency directed the recovery of the aviators."

The Southwest Pacific commander cited Ensign Cook for "displaying extraordinary heroism under exceptionally trying conditions," which, he said, was an inspiring example of devotion to duty.

Axis Admirer Would Succeed

Argentina's Ailing President, U. S. Friend, Reported Quitting

Buenos Aires, June 22 (AP).—Argentina's ailing, inactive president, Roberto Ortiz, supporter of solidarity among democratic nations, is planning to resign because of partial blindness, leaving Active President Ramon S. Castillo, who critics say is favorable to the Axis, in charge of the government, the newspaper La Critica said tonight.

Ortiz's decision was made because his physicians concluded that an operation for failing eyesight, which forced him to retire temporarily almost two years ago, would be impossible, the newspaper said.

The President has been under treatment since he turned over his office to Castillo in July, 1940. A month ago, Dr. Ramon Castroviejo, New York eye specialist, came to Buenos Aires to examine the President.

At that time, La Critica reported that Castroviejo had undertaken the trip at the personal request of President Roosevelt. Ortiz's son, Jorge, had asked Mr. Roosevelt to intervene in his father's case during a recent visit to Washington, the newspaper said then.

Castroviejo spent more than a month with the President and his physicians. At the conclusion of his examination, he was reported to have recommended that an operation be performed.

Rommel Pauses Near Libyan Border; Expected to Attempt Immediate Assault

Lightning Blow

Second Awaited

By Ned Russell
United Press Staff Writer

London (Tuesday), June 23. An estimated 250,000 German paratroops are massed on Crete, threatening an air-borne invasion of Egypt, and some of them already have been used in the storming of Tobruk, it was learned today.

A Cairo dispatch revealed that Tobruk's inner defenses were attacked Saturday by paratroops making their first appearance in the North African war.

They were believed to have come from Crete or other Greek islands, where Lieut. Gen. Kurt Student, the German paratroop expert, has massed an army estimated as high as a quarter of a million to spearhead Hitler's grand offensive against the Middle East.

Student's army is now a peril to the rear of British Imperials massed on the Egyptian border 230 miles south of Crete after their retreat from Libya. It also imperils the British island of Cyprus, off the coast of Free French Syria.

It was doubted that more than an experimental force of paratroops was used against Tobruk and it was believed that it was not flown directly into battle but operated from some airdrome in Libya. However, these same parastroops captured Crete from the British a year ago and were believed capable of operating across a 200-mile water jump against Egypt.

The British on the Egyptian border also faced an imminent frontal assault by Field Marshal Edwin Rommel's Africa corps.

Rommel, gathering his spoils at the fallen British port of Tobruk, 80 miles west of the border, had not begun any full scale attacks on the first Egyptian defense line, although British mobile forces clashed with an Axis column at Sidi Azeiz, 12 miles northwest of the old Italian border fort of Capuzzo, a Cairo communique said. The British column was one which escaped entrapment near Tobruk and swept south to rejoin the main British force.

Nazi Casualties Twice Their Own In Year, Reds Say

Moscow (Tuesday), June 23 (AP).—The Germans have lost 10 million men killed, wounded or taken prisoner in the first year of the war with Russia, against Soviet losses of 4,500,000, the Soviet Information Bureau announced today in a year-end review.

Of the total German casualties, at least 3,500,000 were killed, the announcement said.

It gave German plane losses at 20,000 craft compared to 9000 Russian, and said the Nazis lost 24,000 tanks to Russia's 15,000. The bureau said the Germans also lost 30,500 guns.

Seventy per cent of the Red Army's wounded have returned to action, the announcement said, while Germany has been able to return only 40 per cent of her wounded to the ranks.

This discrepancy was attributed to the overworking of the German ambulance service, which had been geared for a "lightning war."

(Germany said March 8 that her casualties totaled 1,500,000, including killed, wounded and missing. November 21 Germany said 10 million Soviet troops had been killed, wounded or captured.)

Tobruk Fell in Hot And Bitter Battle

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Egypt, June 22 (AP).—The German attack on Tobruk was a lightning blow that reduced the Libyan stronghold with such rapidity that it stunned the British defenders. Many of them never had a chance to offer any real resistance.

Details of the British debacle show that the operation against Tobruk was one of the swiftest blows yet delivered in this war of speed and surprises.

The Germans used parachute troops profusely but futilely in an effort to mop up the British and frustrate their destruction of their supplies before they could fall into Axis hands. Many of the parachutists, ballooning down from big junkers transport planes, were picked off like clay pigeons.

Once having smashed through the port's outer defenses, Marshal Rommel's tanks made straight for the waterfront.

Ships Fight Back

Then the Germans brought up heavy guns to add to the barrage. Some of the ships at the waterfront returned the fire, and the battle raged between tanks and cannon on one side and ships on the other.

The Germans had the advantage since, as far as is known, there were no heavy British vessels in port.

Some of the ships got away, taking off 200 naval ratings, but first reports indicate few if any of the army personnel escaped.

Gen. Wavell's army took Tobruk in February, 1941, capturing 80,000 Italians there in a day and a half. That was considered a swift and brilliant feat. But the Germans appear to have beaten this record by many hours.

Tobruk's fortifications are such that once its 30-mile arc of barbed wire mine fields, tank traps and pill boxes is broken, it does not take long to reduce the entire stronghold because the perimeter defenses can be folled back from inside.

During the last two days of fighting around Tobruk a blazing sun beat down with the temperature up to 120 degrees.

The enemy sent columns in all directions and Italian infantry and artillery, working from the west and south, shelled the town incessantly.

The main German armored force was concentrated on the east with ceaseless Stuka raids upon the British by day and high level bombing by night.

The sun-bronzed and sweating young defenders fought stubbornly, engaging the Axis infantry hand-to-hand even after the enemy tanks had passed through the 5-mile eastern gap.

British, Indians and South Africans stuck to their posts, side-by-side in their steel and underground defenses until the tanks had smashed headlong over them and through the minefields. Then the stout-hearted defenders emerged from their wrecked redoubts to fight with what they could against the oncoming machine-gunning, rifle-firing and grenade-tossing foe.

When the Axis troops came up from the south to pierce the perimeter from El Adem Road it was obvious that the end was near.

An earlier bombing of the Tobruk water tower had made the water situation precarious.

Foe Able to Concentrate

But the Germans and Italians were able to concentrate nearly all their air power on one spot—Tobruk—while the R. A. F. had numerous other fronts to handle at the same time.

As rumbling explosions from the Tobruk garrison's earth-scorching shook the air, scattered parties of German parachutists tumbled out of troop carriers with the intention of mopping up the remaining opposition and of disorganizing and frustrating the Allied attempt to blow up everything within the fortress.

The paratroops didn't succeed and numbers of the Nazis were shot dead on landing by the men of the doomed stronghold.

An awesome pall of black smoke reaching hundreds of feet all but blacked out Tobruk and the perimeter area and gave fiery testimony to the work of destruction wrought by the British.

The hard-pressed defenders applied the torch to huge piles of stores of supplies, high piles of ammunition and oil dumps and aerial reconnaissance later showed that they succeeded in destroying practically everything before the surrender.

Some of the defenders continued to hold out last night in the numerous canyons around Tobruk. Because of the difficulty of attacking them on the ground, the Germans were using parachute troops in cleaning up operations.

Hundreds of Axis troops were dropped from the moonlit sky at several points where British and Indian units fought on.

All Egypt was stunned by the suddenness of the Libyan reverses. British Imperial Forces were glum but determined that no attempt should be made to minimize the seriousness of the defeat.

"preludes of the inevitable disaster that awaits Tojo (the Japanese premier) and his cruel military dictatorship.

"We mean to, and will," he declared, "destroy the last vestiges of that military dictatorship which has dominated Japan for so any years and oppressed the great masses of their people.

"Tojo better get ready. He better get ready to choose the weapon with which he and hundreds of his officers will commit hari-kiri.

"Every Japanese soldier will be swept out of China and Manchuria and Korea, and China will live again—a free country guiding its own destiny."

Hopkins cautioned, however, that there would be defeats and dark days before victory. With reference to China, he said "never was that brave country in such danger. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek can be sure of our aid."

Russia and the Russian army, he said, "are in danger—just as they have been in danger for the last 365 days."

Calling that front the "most important strategic" one in the world, Hopkins said more aid must and would be given the Red army.

Asserting that his country always would be "proud of the mission that has fallen to it—to create the first dam to stem the tide of German aggression," Russian Ambassador to the United States M. M. Litvinoff told the gathering Hitler was "staking his all" in his new offensive on the Soviet Front.

"This," declared Litvinoff in a prepared speech, "is his final throw of the dice."

He said Russia's fighters, encouraged by increasing aid from England and the United States, were "meeting this new assault with the same unexampled heroism, tenacity and fearlessness which they displayed all through the past year, enriched by the experience of war and the study of the enemy's insidious military tricks."

Declaring that Germany's endurance was limited strictly "both as to time and resources," Litvinoff said:

"It would, however, be wrong to suppose that superiority of resources is bound mechanically and in all circumstances to insure victory. Much depends on the rational and timely use of resources. Their dispersal in space and time might neutralize their superiority and lead to disastrous consequences."

Litvinoff declared that the material aid received from England and America, valuable as it was, had not yet "come into scale with the scope of operations."

"There is now, however, every ground for hoping that this situation will be changed in the near future," he said, "and that Hitler will have to relinquish his pet idea of war on one front only."

He said there could be no doubt that if the Nazi machine had been diverted from the Eastern Front when the Red army held the initiative "the whole military situation might have been changed."

"This moment," he added, "was allowed to slip. Let us hope the lesson has not been in vain."

and machines. As the battle intensity increased, German naval units were reported off the fortress, base of the Russian Black Sea fleet, whose sailors are helping its defense.

Two swift torpedo cutters and a submarine—dispatched either from occupied Odessa or the Balkan coast—were reported sighted by two small Russian gunboats. One of the cutters was reported damaged and towed away, and the submarine was said to have crash-dived before machinegun fire.

At one point on the Kharkov front a Red army artillery unit was attacked by a considerable force of infantry supported by heavy guns, but the dispatch said the Russians killed more than 300 Germans and destroyed two Howitzers and damaged five others.

The high command in its day communique declared again that "no significant changes took place at the front" overnight. Around Leningrad the Russians claimed to have killed 350 Germans and silenced nine artillery batteries.

The efficient Soviet artillery was credited with destroying 410 other Germans on the "Western Front" and the Kalinin sectors.

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), June 22 (AP).—Bloody chand-to-hand fighting is raging through the streets along Sewernja Bay in the northern defense sector of Sevastopol, with German forces storming house after house in this shipbuilding section of the Crimean port, high command informants reported tonight.

This drive from the north was matched by equally bitter fighting on the south side of Sevastopol, where the Germans said Rumanian and Nazi forces had smashed a wedge into the Russian defense belt.

German accounts said the Nazi attackers broke into the Sewernaja Bay area after capturing the lost coastal fort there.

The high command said the Russians themselves were attacking on the central front before Moscow and in the Volkhov sector south of Leningrad. The Germans claimed they repulsed the central front assaults, but said fierce fighting continued on the Volhov front, where the Russians had strong tank support.

Guerillas Take Heavy Toll

Moscow, June 22 (INS).—Russian guerillas have killed 26,000 Germans in two secors of the eastern front in the last six months, the Moscow radio announced today.

The broadcast said 11,000 Nazis were slain around Leningrad and 15,000 in the Smolensk area.

Australians Amazed

Melbourne, June 22.—The Australian veterans of Tobruk who held that Libyan fortress for months against the pounding blows of the Axis and who returned to this country as heroes to help defend their homeland are talking with wonder about the quick fall of the town which stood so long as a symbol of Australian resistance.

Because of what it symbolized and because the veterans of Tobruk came from so many homes in this country, little except attacks on Australia itself could have brought the war home more forcibly to the average citizens here.

sible for supervision of the industry operations divisions and will take over the priorities determining functions of the Army and Navy, Munitions Board, which may be abolished.

The biggest job of the third deputy will be direction of WPB's new production requirements plan, a program for integration of the priorities system and quantative allocation of materials.

Fourth Deputy Considered

A fourth deputy chairman may be given charge of the Smaller War Plants Corporation created by a recent act of Congress to help small industries to participate in the war program.

The Civilian Supply and Labor Production Divisions are expected to continue as more or less independent units under WPB's tentative reorganization plan.

A major feature involves divorcement of WPB from direct responsibility for production and purchases of weapons. W. H. Harrison, director of WPB's skeletonized Production and Purchases Division, has been commissioned an Army colonel and will move over to the War Department to replace Brig. Gen. Charles D. Young as head of the purchasing and production unit in Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell's services of supply.

Air Corps Would Be Separate

Under General Somerville, Colonel Harrison will have charge of all Army production and purchases except those for the Air Corps, which will be handled separately.

Also under consideration as part of the reorganization plan is creation of a Board of Production Strategy to provide necessary machinery for gearing production to the needs of military strategy so that the weapons that flow from the production lines will have a direct relation to the varying requirements of world battle fronts.

The new board, if created, would be headed by Nelson. It is expected to be comprised of Harry Hopkins, lend-lease administrator; Vice Admiral S. M. Robinson, Chief of Navy Procurement and Material, and Batt and Knowlson.

Stars Get Palace Bid, Meet Servants Instead of Royalty

London, June 22.—Some 20 top-flight British variety artists were invited a month ago to prepare a command performance for Buckingham Palace, the first of its kind ever to be organized.

The fortunate stars, including Jessie Matthews, Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon, Leslie Henson, Arthur Askey and Stanley Holloway, were the envy of London's West End theatrical profession.

Saturday night, in all their finery and expecting to be presented to King George and Queen Elizabeth, they trooped to the palace. The audience consisted of the palace servants, staff and the home guard. Their Majesties were away for the weekend.

Paratroops Poised to Invade Egypt

Libya in less than a month, were digging in along a 23-mile chain of forts extending from Solum on the Mediterranean coast to Sidi Omar in the desert.

Their job now was to bar the way to Alexandria, home of the British eastern Mediterranean fleet, 300 miles to the east, and although they were believed solidly intrenched on the border, there was a danger of air-borne enemy troops landing in the vast stretch of undefended desert at their rear.

The British disaster at Tobruk was slightly mitigated today by Cairo reports that the garrison had demolished the harbor fixtures before surrendering, lessening the port's value as a supply base for Rommel. Heavy explosions caused by demolitions could be heard far at sea, Cairo said.

It was revealed that British, South African and Indian troops were in the Tobruk garrison which surrendered Sunday morning.

(The German high command said a German torpedo boat flotilla sank eight British vessels trying to flee Tobruk Sunday—an outpost boat, six coastal boats and a 4500-ton transport—and that three other coastal vessels were captured along with 115 seamen. It said a German mine sweeper flotilla forced its way into Tobruk harbor and that 28,000 prisoners were taken in the city and 100 British tanks captured or destroyed.)

(The Berlin radio said a total of 50,000 imperials have been captured in Rommel's latest offensive and that 890 tanks and 235 field guns have been seized or destroyed. Among the tanks seized were American-built "General Grants," which Rommel plans to incorporate into his Africa corps," the radio said.)

(The Italian high command said Axis troops were advancing on the Egyptian border. It said three British planes were shot down over Libya and six British torpedo planes in a Mediterranean battle.)

The R. A. F., still claiming numerical superiority although its fighter planes were unable to operate over Tobruk because of the distance from their Egyptian bases, was striking hard, day and night, at Rommel's bases and supply lines.

Torpedo planes escorted by fighters bombed an escort ship and two large merchant ships, setting one afire, in intercepting a convoy off Tunisia, an R. A. F. communique revealed. Three Axis planes were shot down in the battle.

A strong Axis transport column near Sidi Azeis, and airfields at Gazala and Tmimi also were bombed by the R. A. F. over the weekend. Axis planes attacked the Sidi Barrani area 40 miles inside Egypt Saturday night. In all, eight British planes were lost but one pilot was saved.

Rommel's first main objective, if he attempted to invade Egypt, would be Marsa Matruh, 130 miles from the border, the terminus of the Alexandria railroad. That is the first town in his path with a sufficient water supply for his army. It is 170 miles west of Alexandria.

Losses Heavy, Rommel Says

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), June 22 (AP).—Col. Gen. Erwin Rommel, whose forces have just captured Tobruk, has been promoted to the rank of field marshal general, it was officially announced tonight.

Rommel, broadcasting to the German people, said tonight that the Axis African Corps had suffered "the heaviest losses and privations in storming the Libyan stronghold.

"Behind us are nearly four weeks of hard fighting," he declared in a formal statement on his victory.

"Our troops have crowned their work so far by capturing the Tobruk fortress. Bardia was likewise occupied. German and Italian troops accomplished superhuman performances in this fighting."

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, June 22.—The danger to Egypt was increasing tonight as succeeding communiques terse as they were, showed that the Nazis intend to strike now at the frontier without pausing for rest and equipment.

[The general view in London was that Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's Eighth army faced a decisive battle within 60 days, with Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel having his greatest advantage in his preponderance of armored formations.]

Many Cairo observers felt that the Axis armored superiority, the direct result of a destructive battle between big German guns and British tanks nine days ago, was a greater menace than ever to the British. With the tanks they possess the Axis forces may be able to sweep around the left flank of the British line, brushing aside the light tanks of the defenders, and strike northeastward toward the Nile Valley.

Moreover, it was calculated that reinforcement by American forces "in Asia" would be impossible for two months and that if reinforcements had to be sent from the United States they could hardly take a hand in the battle in less than five months.

There were indications that only a few of the British, South African and Indian troops making up the Tobruk garrison had escaped the enemy.

(A B. B. C. observer in Cairo said that there was no question of embarking troops and that destruction of most of the British motor transport made any large break through by land impossible. At the same time Gen. Jan Smuts, the South African prime minister, announced that "substantial numbers" of South Africans had been lost at Tobruk, but said that most of the South Africans in the campaign remained in the field as a "strong, well equipped and experienced force."

(The German high command said the Tobruk prisoners now totaled 28,000; that more than 100 tanks had been captured or destroyed.)

Churchill, Roosevelt Map Big Offensive

Plan to Strike With Full Allied Power Revealed

By Thomas F. Reynolds

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill revealed jointly last night that the object of their momentous conferences "is the earliest maximum concentration of Allied war power upon the enemy."

In the first joint communique since they met last Thursday night and began to hammer out a new basic strategy for the United Nations, the President and the Prime Minister hinted that the new Allied tactic would be concentration of all power and resources in a single supreme blow at the Axis.

Important technical points involved in the United Nations' war effort and the joint Anglo-American pledge to attack the urgent problems of opening a second front in Europe this year already have been adjusted, the joint statement said.

The joint communique ignored the British disaster in Libya and distressing news from other battle fronts of the World War. Instead it established the basic principle of the strategy under development—a blow at the Axis with every man, gun, plane and tank that can be marshaled for the effort.

Toward this objective, the President and the Prime Minister disclosed that they were reviewing and "concerting all the measures which have for some time past been on foot to develop and sustain the effort of the United Nations."

Full Accord Reported

The text of the statement follows:

"The President and the Prime Minister, assisted by high military, naval and air authorities are continuing at Washington the series of conversations and conferences which began on Friday last.

"The object in view is the earliest maximum concentration of Allied war power upon the enemy, and reviewing or, where necessary, further concerting all the measures which have for some time past been on foot to develop and sustain the effort of the United Nations.

"It would naturally be impossible to give any account of the course of discussions, and unofficial statements about them can be no more than surmise.

"Complete understanding and harmony exists between all concerned in facing the vast and grave tasks which lie ahead. A number of outstanding points of detail which it would have been difficult to settle by correspondence have been adjusted by technical officers after consultation with the President and the Prime Minister."

The communique was released by White House Secretary Stephen T. Early in the midst of a day in which Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill worked side by side, holding an almost endless series of conferences with Navy, Army and Air Force technicians.

The "maximum power" statement suggested that the war leaders of the two great democracies were revising basic strategy to abandon previous policy of fighting defensive actions of half a dozen fronts with insufficient men and inadequate materiel—policy which led to the defeats of Malaya, the Dutch Indies, Burma and finally the disaster on the Libyan Desert. The statement indicated that henceforth the full striking power of America, Britain and their Allies would be combined on a single front, selected by the Allies rather than the Axis, for an ultimate smash at the enemy.

While the President and Prime Minister conferred, the staff of experts who accompanied Churchill to the United States was meeting constantly with American staff experts at the combined Chiefs of Staff Building. Gen. Sir Alan Francis Brooke, chief of the British Imperial Staff, and Maj. Gen. Sir Hastings Lionel Ismay, Churchill's chief of staff, were meeting with Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the fleet; Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Forces of the Army, and Lieut. Gen. Breton B. Somervell, chief of the Army Services of Supply.

He's Telling Us!

Laval Wants Axis to Win, He Declares

By Mel Most

Associated Press Staff Writer

Vichy, June 22.—Flatly declaring "I desire Germany's victory because of the Red peril," Pierre Laval exhorted French industrial workers tonight to go to work in Germany and held out the hope that in exchange Adolf Hitler might agree to make beneficial arrangements for French prisoners of war.

The chief of government and arch-collaborationist, in a radio address to the nation on the second anniversary of the signing of the French-German armistice, appealed to Frenchmen to enter the employ of the Nazis because eventual release of prisoners as well as "the French position in the new Europe" depended on their attitude.

The immediate result, he said, would be a concession from Hitler providing for "liberation of an important number of farmer prisoners who will be able to return to France as soon as you arrive in Germany."

(In other words, French industry will be stripped of workers and the country reduced to a nation of farmers.)

Laval hinted that a deal for exchange of prisoners in general for workers had already been worked out when Gen. Henri Honore Giraud spoiled it by his "sensational escape" from Nazi custody last April.

The plan envisaged, he explained, was not for freeing the prisoners, but for "transformation of their lot into that of free workmen."

In these words he dashed the hopes nursed for more than two years in the homes of a million and a half war prisoners—hopes that all would be freed and permitted to return to France.

"The moment of liberation has been allowed to slip by," he added. "It was not possible, but since Germany is making war against the Soviets, the labor power of a great number of our prisoners has become indispensible to her.

"I have reason to believe that Chancellor Hitler was disposed to take certain generous measures."

Refers to Giraud Escape

Refering to the escape of General Giraud from German custody last April, Laval said:

"It was then that a painful incident arose: a sensational escape. In consequence, a notice was served on the French government that henceforth all facilities granted prisoners would be suspended and that all liberations, even in individual cases, would be stopped."

After painting this black picture, he held out the brighter prospect that "in this situation a new hope arises for our prisoners," and addressed himself to workers who, he said, "if they answer my appeal, if they agree to go to work in Germany, I know they will find a welcome there."

Again and again he reiterated his appeal with words such as "workmen of France must respond to my appeal. I have grave reasons to ask it of them and they must understand that more than our daily life is involved. . . . Understand that one day we will have to negotiate a peace."

Paints Rosy Future for France

Laval assured workmen that as a result of a German victory "you will have nothing to fear but everything to hope from the regime which will be installed among us."

"A younger, a more human and stronger republic is to be born," he went on. "Socialism will be installed everywhere in Europe and the form it will adopt in France will be designed by our national character."

"We must either take part in the new Europe or be resigned to being cheated. If I tell you this policy is the one to save France and guarantee a good future you must believe me.

"It is for the liberty of war prisoners that you must go to work in Germany. It is to give France her position in the new Europe.

Referring to the Nazi need for labor, Laval declared "France can not be passive now and just look on at the sacrifices of Germany."

"At the moment France lacks raw materials," he said, "our factories are slowing down. Unemployment is becoming worse. Numerous workers are without work when Germany needs man power very urgently."

For the work for the Germans he promised high wages and bonuses for those separated from families.

Hitler Reported Complimenting Laval

London, June 22 (INS).—Reuters News Agency reported tonight in a dispatch from the "French frontier" that Adolf Hitler had sent a letter to Pierre Laval complimenting the latter on his solution of the problem of providing French labor for Germany.

The Germans, according to this source, also have requested Vichy to hand over a number of French Railway engines, 30,000 freight cars and 650,000 tons of cereals to the Reich.

Sidelights of the War

Stalin Receives Greeting From Churchill

London, June 22 (AP).—A message from Prime Minister Churchill to Josef Stalin on the first anniversary of the German invasion of Russia said today: "The fighting alliance of our two countries and of our other Allies, to whom there has now been joined the vast resources of the United States, will surely bring our enemies to their knees."

"You can count on us to assist you by every means in our power," the Prime Minister added.

The message contained "a renewed expression of our admiration for the magnificent defense of your armed forces, guerilla bands and civilian workers" and expressed the conviction that "those achievements will be equaled and surpassed in the coming months."

Churchill declared that the recent British-Russian 20-year pact "is a pledge that we shall confound our enemies and when the war is over build a sure peace for all freedom loving peoples."

A 'Revolutionary War'

Toronto, June 22 (AP).—The Earl of Athlone, Governor General of Canada, told the thirty-third annual convention of Rotary International today that "this is a revolutionary war and a revolutionary peace will be by no means incompatible."

Another war is likely unless the peace is revolutionary, he continued.

White Russian Given 5 Years as Axis Spy

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., June 22.—Anastase A. Vonsiatsky, who was willing to furnish Germany and Japan with United States military information in order to even his score with the Soviet regime in Russia, went to prison for five years as a spy today and was fined $5000.

Federal Judge J. Joseph Smith imposed sentence after the 42-year-old world leader of the Russian National Revolutionary Fascist Party pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him and four others with conspiracy to violate the 1917 Espionage Act.

Two other defendants, the Rev. Kurt Molzarn of Philadelphia and Dr. Wolfgang Ebell, El Paso, Tex., physician, were arraigned today and pleaded innocent.

A fourth, Dr. Otto Willumeit, Chicago leader of the German-American Bund, has pleaded guilty, but his sentence has been deferred until after the trial of Mr. Molzahn and Dr. Ebell, scheduled to start July 15. The fifth defendant, Gerhard Wilhelme Kunze, New Jersey-born former national head of the bund, is a fugitive.

Thomas J. Dodd, prosecuting the case as a special assistant to the Attorney General, told the court the Government could prove that Vonsiatsky, owner of a palatial estate in Thompson, had a "direct connection" with the Japanese Embassy.

Judge Smith said he was imposing the relatively short sentence on Vonsiatsky because "he is not the head of the conspiracy and has come into court saving the Government time and expenses and enabling the Government to go ahead with more important work stamping out rings still in operation."

The indictment on June 10 accused the defendants of gathering information about the United States Army, Navy and defense industries and sending it abroad through Kunze who was given $2800 traveling expenses by Vonsiatsky.

Martin W. Littleton of New York, Vonsiatsky's lawyer, declared that Vonsiatsky, Warsaw-born nobleman impoverished and put to flight by the Bolshevik revolution, had no sympathy for Germany or Japan, but intended to use them to crush the Soviet regime.

Navy Convoys Merchantmen From Maine to Florida

vettes to permit shipping to move in convoys along the East Coast, or whether there was a change of policy and warships were diverted from other theaters was not stated.

It is believed, however, that it will be many months before enough vessels must be concentrated on the overseas supply routes over which war material are carried to the fighting fronts.

Whether the Nation's shipyards have turned out enough of the small fast sub chasers and corvettes of the antisubmarine craft are built to bring the Western Hemisphere U-boat raids under control.

During the last 30 days that the East Coast convoy system was in effect, the Navy announced 65 Axis submarine attacks on merchantmen on our side of the Atlantic. A total of 49 were listed during the month before that.

The number of attacks in the Caribbean jumped tremendously. Navy announcements during the last 30 days listed 29 ships torpedoed in this area compared with but 5 the month before.

There was a drop, however, in U-boat activity in the Gulf of Mexico. Official announcements of the past month record 8 ships torpedoed in this area compared with 12 listed during the preceding 30 days.

The number of Atlantic attacks announced last month—28—is only 4 less than the month before, but most of these were far out at sea—outside the coastal shipping lanes of the Eastern sea frontier. Many of these were surface attacks in which the enemy U-boat shelled and sunk the ships rather than torpedoing them.

21 Attacks Away From Convoys

Twenty-one of the attacks in the Atlantic were definitely placed outside the convoy-protected coastal lanes of the East Coast, according to the unofficial estimates, while only one was known to have occurred within this area. The locations of six other attacks are not known, but are believed to have been out to sea.

Last week, the Axis launched what is probably their answer to the institution of the convoy system within the Eastern sea frontier. Their U-boats reluctant to attack the strongly guarded convoys, sowed mines along the coastal lanes. At least two ships have been struck by these lethal weapons. One was sunk and the other damaged.

The Navy has listed 228 United Nations merchant ships sunk in the western Atlantic (including the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean). Announcements from other American countries raise the total to 290.

Reporter Sees Collier Sink

By J. Norman Lodge

Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard a Submarine Chaser with an Atlantic Patrol—(Delayed).—"This," said the Navy public relations officer, "will be only an indoctrination cruise and you'll probably find it rather boring."

Within the next half hour and still within sight of an Eastern port, a "light" collier was blown up on our left, we had sighted a submarine periscope, dropped eight depth charges, picked up a dozen survivors from the collier, transferred them to a mine sweeper and continued on our patrol.

If you've never been to sea in an 83-foot sub chaser, you can't appreciate what our Coast Guard are doing. And they're doing it with only the healthy gripe that augurs well for morale.

We left an East Coast port shortly after 7 a. m., June 17, after spending the night aboard the chaser. Heading out to sea to pick up our convoy, we were turning up only about 500 revolutions on our two 600-horsepower motors when the chief bo'sun, a Finn with 20 years' service with the Coast Guard, shouted:

"Periscope dead ahead."

Crew Spring Into Action

Instantly, the 12-man crew sprang into action. The machine guns at port and starboard positions were manned by the cook and engine man, the forward gun was taken in charge by a first-class coxswain, the chief machinist's mate unleashed the depth charges aft and two other petty officers stood by the port and starboard charges.

Revolving up the full 1200 turns, the bo'sun who had sighted the periscope steered directly for the place he had seen the submarine's eye and four minutes later the first of eight cans went overboard.

With a sound reminiscent of a distant thunder, the depth charges exploded. A geyser fully 50 feet high appeared off the stern and our 83-footer left the water momentarily. Again and again the depth charges sought the enemy and as many times the seemingly frail craft leaped into the air.

Suddenly the bo'sun, who was navigating the chaser, shouted to the ensign, John Dhue, a chief petty officer of 18 years service now temporarily commissioned, "No. 10 just got it."

Number 10 was the collier, tenth ship in line, an interloper for she wasn't listed for our convoy. That was exactly 7:45 a. m. The next few minutes were the most dramatic of my life and nothing I saw in Europe or on the Atlantic or North Sea compares with it. Here is the way my notes reads:

7:45 a. m. collier hit. 7:52, picked up 12 survivors. 8:02, ship turtled, only the rolling chocks showing.

"8:10, ship disappeared, sliding under the running sea like a tired man stretching out on a sofa after a hard day's work.

"8:15, survivors transferred to mine sweeper after being given hot coffee and dry dungarees.

"8:25, convoy now out of sight, we circled seeking oil slicks, then starter in pursuit of our convoy. We found no tell-tale oil slicks, evidently the submarine got away.

"8:32, skipping over waves, mostly out of water, we pound out 18 knots and come within sight of our charges, now running in tandem.

"8:35, crew dismissed from battle stations and the cook, calmly turning from his machine guns, goes below to brew a new urn of coffee."

Later, we were told the collier had struck a mine and had not been torpedoed. Still later, over the radio, we learned that the sweeper to which we had transferred our survivors had struck a mine en route to port but that all aboard were saved.

Three Men Missing

The collier, with a crew of 47, had suffered three casualties, two mess boys and a fireman being missing.

That's the way the Coast Guard, now part of the Navy, works. No fuss, no feathers, solid American youths eager to do their bit that the seas may be safe for our merchant shipping.

Navy blimps and planes roar overhead and deploy when escort vessels signal that sound has been picked up. Its all part of the protection the Government is giving merchantmen—the ships that take the fod and munitions to the United Nations and to our own Army overseas.

200,000 Chileans Demand Break With Axis, Seizures

Santiago, Chile, June 22 (AP).—Resolutions approved by a mass meeting of some 20,000 Chileans demanding a rupture of relations with the Axis, confiscation of Nazi-Fascist property and the establishment of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union will be submitted to the Chilean government.

Marcial Mora, national chairman of the Radical Party, of which President Juan Antonio Rios is a member, addressed the meeting which was organized yesterday by the Chilean Confederation of Workers. Chile and Argentina are the only two South American countries which have not broken relations with the Axis.

Mora told the meeting that a "united Chile, rising above political quarrels, will fulfill her destiny at the opportune moment" and said Chile was not indifferent to the outcome of the war. United States Ambassador Claude G. Bowers was present at the meeting, called to honor Mexico and demand the rupture of relations with the Axis.

Psychology Enters District Housing

Rent Control Board, said the present law places a hard psychological burden on the landlord. He predicted the proposed change not only would open hundreds of rooms in the homes of patriotic residents but also would result in more happiness.

Also approved by the committee yesterday was a measure to grant passes on buses and streetcars to special police and guards in Federal buildings and on Capitol Hill.

Held over for more study was the bill recommended by Representative McGehee (Democrat) of Mississippi to permit a reduction in the rate of payment under the District's unemployment compensation law. McGehee said the District now has the "dangerous surplus" of more than 26 million dollars in its unemployment compensation fund.

The present rate of 2.7 per cent brings in about six million dollars annually, although expenditures have never gone much above two million dollars, he said. His bill would permit the rate to slide from one-half of 1 per cent to 2.7 per cent and provide that the surplus never would go under around ten million dollars.

Experience Rating

Strong opposition was voiced by members who hope to see an "experience rating" bill put into effect, not only in the District, but throughout the Nation. Under such a rating, employers with steady employment would pay less rates than those offering part-time work.

Held over for consideration by the committee next Monday was a bill requiring citizenship as a prerequisite for obtaining a license to practice the healing arts in Washington. This measure has been passed by the Senate, but Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland yesterday proposed an amendment that would permit substitution of declaration of intention for full citizenship. The District Commissioners were asked to appear on Monday with an opinion on this change.

On a regular "District Day" schedule, the House yesterday afternoon consumed only 4 minutes passing three local bills.

Two of them were for relief of custodial employes of the public schools. One would allow these employes to receive compensation for the extra work entailed by wartime programs in school buildings and the other would allow them to get back pay for work they have done already for the Selective Service System in keeping buildings open for draft registrations.

The third provides for placing a bust of the late Senator George E. Chamberlain in Gallinger Hospital. Cost of this venture was set at not more than $500.

Mrs. Roosevelt Named 'Working Girl's Friend'

New York, June 22 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been selected as "the working girl's best friend" by the Jewish Working Girls Vacation Society, a nonprofit organization affiliated with the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies.

Mrs. Maxwell Steinhardt, society president, said the changed type of girl camper at the society's two summer camps in recent years was "a living monument to Mrs. Roosevelt's great work in promoting the cause of the working girl."

view of Britain's vast production efforts and privations caused by diversion of shipping to military convoys.

In view of the North African defeat, Churchill's assurance to Stalin and the Russians that they "can count on us to assist you by every means in our power" sounded hollow to many Britons.

Faith in Victory Remains

There wa no weakening in the faith of the Allies' ability to "bring our enemies to their knees," as Churchill promised Stalin, but there was bitter disillusionment.

The Evening News, usually strongly pro-Churchill, said tonight that "Parliament will fail in its duty if it does not probe this new inglorious failure (Tobruk) to its source."

Henderson Stewart, Labor M. P., demanded "an immediate inquiry" into the facts concerning statements of air superiority.

Capt. Liddell Hart, a leading military writer, said this:

"The chief doubt lies in the way our official calculations have so often and so obviously gone astray—which implies that there is something wrong either in the calculating apparatus in Whitehall or in the direction on the spot."

vey has been made, and possibly also at Sibley and Garfield. The new nurses' quarters at Columbia will free space for 47 more patients.

Removal of 100 convalescent tuberculosis patients to the old Tuberculosis Hospital at Thirteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest will allow that many tuberculars to be moved from Gallinger to the Glenn Dale Sanatorium. The present tuberculosis wing at Gallinger will be used as a venereal clinic.

All indigent patients will be taken from other city hospitals and housed at Gallinger in the new plan.

Commissioner Guy Mason, who called the meeting, said he had no idea how much all of this will cost. Remodeling the Thiekeld School is estimated at $35,000, and the new wing at Gallinger at $200,000. Mason said he hoped to get the funds from the second Lanham Act appropriation now pending in Congress.

Present at the meeting were Charles P. Taft and James Bruno of the Federal Security Agency, Frank Sullivan of the FWA, Dr. Vennon Hogue, Public Health Service consultant; Harold Lund, Dr. William White and District Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning.

Chinese Stall Japs 6th Day, Hit Rail Cities

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 22.—Strong Chinese assaults on the railway towns of Lungyu and Chuhsien, along the Japanese supply line through Chekiang Province, were reported tonight, in a Chinese communique which told of widespread Chinese activitiy behind the invaders' advanced positions.

In Kiangsi Province, west of Chekiang, the Japanese have been held virtually to a standstill for six days in their attempts to pinch off the last 50 miles of the Chekiang-Kiangsi rail line remaing in Chinese hands, the communique said.

Chinese forces shunted aside by the swift Japanese thrust along the railway into Kiangsi Province reorganized and were said to have driven outlying Japanese garrisons back upon Kinhwa with heavy losses.

Just west of the Chekiang-Kiangsi border heavy fighting was reported in the hills south of Kwangfeng where one Japanese column thrust toward the Fukien Province border.

The high command said that since June 16 there had been little change in positions in the fight for the last Chinese-held segment of the 450-mile railroad which links Hangchow and Nanchang.

Germans Execute 130 More Czechs

Stockholm, June 22 (AP).—German authorities, in a new series of reprisal killings, executed 130 persons in Czecho-Slovakia during the last three days. The Berlin correspondent of the newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said tonight.

These were the first executions reported from Czecho-Slovakia since the Germans announced Thursday they had caught and executed the slayers of Reinhard Heydrich.

Eighty-four persons were said to have been shot on Friday, making this one of the bloodiest days since the reprisal killings started. Another 28 were executed Saturday and 18 Sunday.

Children's Museum Donated War Gift By Mrs. Wilson

Gift of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, a miniature pitcher and six tankards fashioned from shells and shrapnel have been added to the collection of the Children's Museum, 4215 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

The widow of America's World War I President brought the gift to the museum last Saturday. Inscribed "Souvenir de la Grand Guerre, 1914-19," it was presented to her in Paris on the occasion of the Peace Conference in 1919.

Current feature exhibit at the museum is a collection of 17-inch statuettes of the Presidents' wives, similar to the life-sized figures at the Smithsonian Institution. Loaned to the museum by their creator, Sculptress Ethel McLean, the statuettes will be on view daily, except Mondays, through July 4.

'Gasless Day' Ruling Delayed Until Today

Parley Postponed By Wainwright's Horse Accident

The gasoline, tire and automobile situation isn't much better. But don't get a horse.

Harry R. Wainwright, research director of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Association, who was to have placed a proposal for a one-day closing of local filling stations before officials here yesterday as a means of saving fuel and permitting station workers to join the scrap rubber hunt, took to a horse Sunday at the Manor Club and was thrown.

Nursing a fractured collarbone and severe bruises in the Montgomery County General Hospital, Wainwright was unable to attend the scheduled meeting and it was postponed until 10 a. m. today in the office of the District salvage committee. A statement from Wainwright, containing his suggestion, will be read to the meeting which is expected to be attended by J. P. McDonald, District chairman of the petroleum industry war council, which is conducting the rubber campaign; George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club; Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the American Automobile Association; J. L. Dwyer, assistant to the director of the petroleum war council; C. C. Simpson, of the Independent Tire Dealers Association; Horace Walker, executive secretary of the District salvage committee, and others.

Keneipp yesterday fell in line with the Wainwright proposal for a one-day closing of the stations. Walker previously approved of it. Keneipp felt that the critical rubber shortage alone would justify the move.

Meanwhile, it was learned that considerable confusion reigns among rubber salvagers as a result of a request last week by William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council, for operators of collection depots to mutilate tires and other articles turned in by the public so that they would not be usable.

Differences of opinion among Government officials over the advisability of such action forced Boyd to rescind the instructions the following day. They were contained in a confidential telegram, dated June 15, to top regional and State collection officials for transmittal to service stations and other collection depots.

400-Pound Tire Donated

Washington began throwing heavy lots of rubber into the eight-day-old accumulations yesterday. Karl P. Hughes, district traffic manager for the United Air Lines, donated a 400-pound window display tire (passed its operation 'usefulness) from a Douglas DC-3 to the drive yesterday. The Goodwill Industries received it, to gain $4 at the penny-a-pound price. The Government will get the rubber.

D. C. Shepard, secretary-treasurer of the Mellon National Art Gallery Commission, informed the salvage committee yesterday that the gallery's 250 employes have brought 3000 pounds of rubber to the gallery. It will be collected at 10 a. m. today by the Volunteers of America.

Trucks of the Salvation Army, the Goodwill Industries, the Self-Help Exchange and the Volunteers of America set out at noon yesterday on collections of scrap rubber left by citizens at shoe repair shops, police and fire stations and garages. Wholesale oil dealers have removed scrap left at the filling stations since the drive began on June 15.

The meeting of the automobile and petroleum group representatives in the salvage committee offices today will inquire into the quantities of scrap donated here. The drive, nationally, was described yester by the Petroleum Council as the greatest "in American history."

Floyd W. Traylor, a Boonville, (Ind.) dentist, suggested that members of his profession, hospitals and roentgenologists collect the rubber holders in which X-ray plates are packed and which ordinarily are thrown away after each use.

Orchestra Leader George Keller of Evansville, Ind., mailed Petroleum Coordinator Ickes a rubber-holstered water pistol with a suggestion that it be sent back to Japan, where it was made.

All of the rubber collected will go into America's fighting machines.

The Salvation Army yesterday was preparing to move 3000 pounds of scrap rubber from a salvage depot behind the Munitions Building at Constitution Avenue and Twenty-first Street. The hour for collection was set for 11:30 a. m. today.

The Petroleum War Council yesterday reported that the incomplete Nation-wide county returns indicate that the Middle West and Far West relatively are far outstripping the East in contributing tonnage to the stock pile.

All Cousins

5 of 2000 Kin to Share In Estate

About 2000 persons—Americans, New Zealanders and Irishmen—who claimed they were cousins of the late Miss Mary Frances White of Washington, were denied shares of her $550,000 estate in the United States Court of Appeals yesterday.

The court ruled that Miss White, who died here April 25, 1939, could not have intended inclusion of them in her will when she wrote:

I give and bequeath to each one of my cousins living at the time of my death, irrespective of the remoteness of their relationship . . . one thousand dollars.

A literal interpretation of the phrase "irrespective of their relationship," it was claimed by attorneys for five first cousins, would include the whole human race, since all could trace their descent back to Adam and Eve.

The court agreed in effect, holding that strict construction of the will "would exhaust the estate, and thereby prevent payment of more than a fractional part of the bequests."

The five cousins winning the suit are Francis P. White, M. Stella White and Mary Freund of Washington, Louis C. White of San Francisco and Robert E. White of New York.

Under the terms of the will, Catholic University received $100,000 and Holy Cross College $5000. Numerous charitable organizations also benefited.

Hay Fever Season Brings Weed Warning

A Congressional act restricting the height of weeds in the District to four inches was cited yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland in warning that the hay fever season is once more upon us.

There are 15,000 sufferers from hay fever in Washington, many of whom will not be able to escape the plague by going away as in former years, it was pointed out. Therefore he urged that people keep their lawns, and especially vacant lots, neatly clipped and free of weeds.

Persons who don't cooperate for the relief of the hay fever clan can be fined $10 a day under the act, which specifies four inches as the highest a weed legally can grow here. Also, the District can send in its clean-up crews and bill the offender for the costs.

The sufferers themselves are urged by Ruhland to take preseasonal treatments which, he says, will give 75 per cent relief to about 85 to 95 per cent of the unhappy 15,000.

Fifteen-year-old Clarence Young, Negro, of 1241 Union Court Southwest, was drowned while swimming in Boundary Channel yesterday afternoon. The boy's body was recovered by Wallace Redwine of 1167 Fifth Street Northeast. He was the son of Mrs. Maggie Young, Park Police said.

Present Gas Plan Extended to July 22

"Car clubs, in which four, or more, persons arrange to ride to and from work together, have, therefore, been made a requirement for any supplemental rations to be granted under the plan. To avoid confusion and inconvenience after the plan goes into effect, every effort should be made to form as large a number as possible of these clubs before the registration period.

Meanwhile after another gasoline-shortage weekend, creating turbulent scenes in some Eastern sections and leaving thousands of motorists stranded on the roads in ranging states of temper, thirsty gasoline tanks became replenished as quickly as wholesalers could make their round with the third monthly allotment.

Washington got the fuel and more will come in the next few days. But in prospect, also, is the possibility of a fasolineless day this week, recommended by motoring and fuel groups to save gasoline and rubber. A decision is expected today.

As the East emerged from one of its severest rationing trials, Congressmen moved to end all plans for Nation-wide gasoline rationing and to investigate the whole gasoline situation.

The proposal by Senator Maloney (Democrat) of Connecticut for a five-member special committee and a $5000 appropriation for the investigation was said to have gained congressional leaders' support. Such a committee would investigate shortages of gasoline and fuel oil along with the methods used to provide deliveries "for ordinary consumer use."

While expected to deal principally with the Eastern gas drought, extending over the 17 rationed States, it was predicted that the inquiry would have a direct bearing on the situation as a whole.

Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma and Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana did not foresee a Nation-wide spread of the rationing. Expansion of the rationed area might, it has been argued, depend upon how much rubber the scrap campaign produces.

"I think the people are doing a better job now of conserving rubber by cutting down on the use of their cars than could be done by Nation-wide rationing of gasoline," Mr. Connally stated.

Predicting that Nation-wide rationing would not be undertaken, Mr. Thomas said he was convinced there was no need for limiting gasoline sales except in the Eastern region. The protests from all parts of the country are so great, Mr. Wheeler asserted, that in his opinion no Nation-wide restriction ever would be ordered.

A member of a committee investigating the gasoline situation last fell, Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland said he hoped a speedy inquiry would be made into the "confusion" of public statements about the transportation of gasoline and fuel oil to the East.

It was unofficially estimated that Washington would receive some three million gallons of gasoline in its allotment, started yesterday. Evidently, motorists in large numbers were enabled to fuel their machines. The American Automobile Association said it had very few calls yesterday from its members who sought gasoline, while on Sunday 1000 such calls were received in 12 hours.

In Philadelphia, hard-hit by the rationing over the weekend, A. Reed Engle, president of that city's Associated Gasoline Dealers, said the shortage was caused by doubling the value of units on ration cards to six gallons without increasing the supply to the stations. The operators, he observed, "are taking plenty of abuse."

60% of Seats In D. C. Autos Still Unshared

The American Automobile Association put out some spotters yesterday and found how Washington is cooperating in the share-your-car plan to save gasoline and rubber.

More than 60 per cent of the available seat space in cars entering and leaving the downtown area was unoccupied, the check-up showed. Briefly, 13,301 automobiles carried 25,891 passengers, an average of 1.9 per car.

The A. A. A. observed: "This is far short of the five passengers per car which the Office of Defense Transportation has set as the goal in its share-rides campaign. It shows clearly that there must be an intensification of efforts to get Washington workers to swap rides as a means of conserving rubber. The fact that Washington cars are not fully occupied does not mean that we can get along with fewer cars. It does mean that we must make more efficient use of these cars."

The Office of Civilian Defense yesterday reported that of the 31,000 Government employes in this metropolitan area who are driving cars to work more than 15,000 are now participating in the share-your-car plan. Among the large departments where the car-sharing plan has shown the most progress, it was said, are:

Treasury, with 3355 participants out of 5078 who drive to work; Navy, with 2100 out of 3500; War, with 4969 out of 8000, and Agriculture, with 1100 out of 1800. First agency to report 100 per cent participation was the Board of Investigation and Research-Transportation, although only 10 car owners drive to work at this office.

Police Explain Ban

Meanwhile, Park Police issued an explanation as to why Navy Department officials driving to work in Arlington have been prohibited from picking up fellow employes at the Washington end of Memorial Bridge.

The order was issued by Capt. Mark H. Raspberry of the Park Police, it was said, as a safeguard against accidents. It was pointed out that there have been several accidents involving cars and pedestrians at that point, which was described as "a particularly dangerous spot."

Park Police officials added that there was no intention to interfere with the operation of the "share-your-car" program, and that nonmotorists were free to hitch as many rides as they pleased if they chose a less dangerous spot some distance from the bridge entrance.

Safety Group to Meet

A woman's safety committee, headed by Mrs. Paul McNutt, Mrs. George C. Thorpe and Mrs. Emil Hurja, has scheduled a meeting for 3:30 p. m. today at the Shoreham Hotel to discuss means of furthering the share-your-car plan.

D. C. Rationing Board Sets Up New Offices in Brown School

The District Rationing and Price Control Administration is now located at the E. V. Brown Elementary School, 5601 Connecticut Avenue, District Price Administrator Whitney Leary announced last night.

The former quarters in the old Force School, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue, will still be used by a ration board, Leary said. The new telephone number for the executive offices is ORdway 6700 and the ration boards are now reached through ADams 0280 and 0338.

Leary said the move, occasioned by need of more space, would not inconvenience the public in spite of the rather remote location of the Brown School Building. Most of the public contact will be through local rationing boards, Leary said. There would be few occasions for anyone but rationing officials to visit the new offices.

Besides Leary, District Ration Chief L. P. Steuart, Thomas K. Randall, deputy administrator; James Mulcahy, director of the organization division; James M. Michael, acting head of the price control section; Mrs. Ned Brown Bliss, public relations chief, and John P. Buernshub, personnel chief, are in the building, recently acquired by the District from the Board of Education.

Pupils who would have attended the Brown School are now transferred to the Lafayette School.

Mrs. Mason's Death Declared Suicide

A certificate of suicide in the death of Mrs. Sue F. Mason, 42, of the Marlyn Apartments, Thirty-ninth Street and Cathedral Avenue Northwest, was issued yesterday by Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy. Mrs. Mason, who was the wife of Comdr. Robert E. Mason, U.S.N., was found hanging from a door frame by a bed sheet Sunday night.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury pronounced the death of the District's fifty-fourth traffic victim of the year, James L. Advertising Can Strengthen Desire for Liberty By Reiteration of Benefits, President Says

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—President Roosevelt said today that "the desire for liberty and freedom can be strengthened by reiteration of their benefits" through advertising.

In a message to the thirty-eighth annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America, the President said:

"It is obvious that there are many changes going on in your field. For the duration there will be a diminution in product advertising, but this does not mean an end of advertising.

"There are many messages which should be given the public through the use of advertising space. The desire for liberty and freedom can be strengthened by reiteration of their benefits.

"If the members of your organization will, wherever possible, assist in the war program and continue the splendid spirit of cooperation which they have shown during the past year, advertising will have a worthwhile and patriotic place in the Nation's total war effort."

Bruce Barton, president of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne, New York, declared in the convention keynote address that the American people were "having a taste of totalitarianism" by relinquishing many things and "are cheerfully determined to continue this self-denial for the duration" of the war.

"But let any man or group of men after the war suggest that this regimentation be permanent, and he or they will find themselves promptly separated from the public payroll," Barton added.

"We Know It Is Best"

"In the good days of peace we thought democracy was the best form of government; now, having lost it temporarily, we know it is best, and we want it promptly restored."

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the office of defense transportation, told the advertisers that "for a long time" no ships had operated between the East and West Coasts through the Panama Canal and that as a result the railroads had carried the entire burden of transcontinental traffic, made heavy by the war.

He said that at present the railroads were carrying about 700,000 barrels of gasoline a day to the eastern seaboard, much of it from the remote Southwest.

Reports that American ports were blocked by accumulated goods were denied by Eastman who said the ports "are not blocked, but are in liquid condition."

"Considerable overseas freight is in storage at the ports and elsewhere, but it is not being stored to any important extent in cars and so it is not interfering with the domestic movement of freight."

No Breakdown in Transport

"Thus far there has been no breakdown and no serious congestion in domestic transportation," he said. "It has done promptly and well all that it has been called upon to do."

Eastman said the railroads had done well, but that theirs would have been a "sorry plight" if it had not been for help given by "their erstwhile foes, the trucks and buses."

"Trucks have been carrying "at least 18 per cent as many ton-miles as the railroads," he said, adding that buses to a large extent had taken the place of the old railroad local trains. As a matter of fact, he said, railroads were among the largest users of trucks and buses.

Because of the rubber shortage, Eastman continued, the railroads faced the prospect of continually increasing freight and passenger traffic.

He said that voluntary restrictions on travel were necessary, but that vacation travel as yet had not been classified as unnecessary, although employers had been asked to spread vacations throughout the year and to make more of them begin and end in the middle of a week.

'Them Foreigners' Cause Illiteracy, Says Talmadge

Atlanta, June 22 (AP).—"I admit it," beamed Gov. Eugene Talmadge today. "I'm an authority on illiteracy and Dr. John W. Studebaker, director of the United States Office of Education, is, too, and it's a funny thing, we both agree."

Agree on what? That New York is the most illiterate State in the Nation, said the Governor.

A few days ago Talmadge selected New York, with "all them foreigners up there," as the most illiterate State.

Today, Talmadge exhibited a magazine article in which Studebaker was quoted as saying that illiteracy is highest in New York State, with 1,020,000 illiterates. The Federal educator ranked Pennsylvania second, Texas third, and Iowa lowest with 61,000.

(The article Talmadge showed reporters did not mention Georgia or go into details as to percentage of illiteracy in the States named.

(Defining an illiterate as any person over 10 years of age who can not write any language, the 1930 census showed Georgia with 8.4 per cent of its population illiterate, New York 3.7, Pennsylvania 3.1 and Iowa .8.)

Hawaii Still In Peril, Warns Gen. Emmons

By Walter Clausen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Honolulu, June 22.—Warning that the United States victory over the Japanese in the Battle of Midway "has given many people a false sense of security," Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons today urged all non-residents to leave the Hawaiian Islands as soon as possible.

Although American Air and Naval Forces early this month routed the largest fleet Japan ever sent across the international dateline in what may have been an attempted invasion of the United States West Coast, it is dangerous to assume the enemy will not return, said General Emmons, commander of the Hawaiian Department, United States Army.

"The outcome of the battle of Midway has given many people a false sense of security," Emmons said in a statement. "Nothing can be more dangerous than such an attitude. To assume the enemy will not return in force and utilize every weapon at his disposal is the most dangerous kind of wishful thinking.

"It is important to our war effort that all civilians, especially all nonresident women, children and dependent persons who are not engaged in essential war work, make plans for evacuation to the mainland and depart as soon as possible.

"I urge all non-residents who are not needed in war work to place their affairs in shape and depart for the mainland as soon as space becomes available. Practically all Army and Navy dependents have been evacuated."

New Proposal Would Allow Bond Purchases To Be Claimed as Limited Tax Credit

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A plan for postwar credits for both individuals and corporations will be submitted to the Senate Finance Committee after the big war revenue bill clears the House, it was learned last night.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Finance Committee, said he had long favored and would present to his group an induced savings plan that would stimulate war bond purchases and build up both individual and business reserves for postwar rehabilitation.

Briefly, George's plan would allow bond purchases up to a given limit as a credit against taxes. Bonds, non-negotiable and bearing no interest, would be permitted as a deduction up to about 15 per cent of the tax. They would be redeemable at a set period after the war. The matured bonds would be subject to capital gains taxes.

Earlier Plan Rejected

A postwar credit plan confined to corporations with excess profits, backed by the Treasury and War Production Chief Donald Nelson, was considered last week by the House Ways and Means Committee, but was rejected after a sharp disagreement over the specific form it should take.

Unlike the George formula, this would have applied only to corporations having excess profits, and was designed as an offset against the 94 per cent excess profits tax. Under that proposal, which may be called up for another House test, 14 per cent of the profits tax would be returned to corporations in the form of a certificate redeemable in the third year after the war.

Although the plan was rejected, the committee approved it "in principle" and an eleventh-hour effort at revival is expected.

Driving for final action this week to place a completed tax bill before the House by July 6, the Ways and Means Committee meanwhile adopted a series of general and special relief provisions to meet "hardship" cases arising under the 94 per cent excess profits tax.

Before moving to ease the profits tax burden on corporations, the committee turned thumbs down on suggestions to subject either bank checks or bank withdrawals to special excise levies. The committee defeated a proposed 3-cent tax on each bank check and an alternative plan to tax bank withdrawals one-tenth of 1 per cent.

The committee's excess profits tax relief action ranged from power in the Board of Tax Appeals to make special allowances for corporations suffering unusual interruptions from strikes or other causes during their base average earning period (1936 to 1939), to permission for mining and oil companies to exclude from their excess profits income special war production bonuses granted them by the Government. In the latter case, relief was granted as an offset against depletion of their oil or mine deposits.

Another Relief Provision

Still another relief provision would permit corporations to revise their four-year average earnings tax to provide a more liberal allowance for their poorest year of earnings. Companies could compute their average earnings excess profits tax base by selecting their three best years during the 1936-1939 period, and averaging their earnings in those years. Seventy-five per cent of that average could be substituted for the earnings in their "worst year."

Under the committee amendments, approved on recommendation of the Treasury and Congressional staff experts, excess profits tax relief would be extended to corporations which could prove that their base period net income was abnormally low, and to those companies suffering from unduly depressed economic conditions peculiar to the company or to the industry. In special cases where taxpayers are not eligible to use the average earnings method under present law, relief might be provided if the company could establish that the invested capital method did not provide a reasonable tax base.

Corporations filing claims for relief would be required to pay only 87 per cent of the excess profits tax on which an adjustment was sought, pending settlement.

Women Urged To Give Russ Moral Help

A call was issued yesterday by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman of the Washington Chapter of Russian War Relief, to the women of America to send a vibrant message of greeting and encouragement, of good will and friendship, to the women of Russia who are fighting bravely beside their men on a 2000-mile line, the biggest battle front in history.

The Russian women are working in factories and in fields, in civilian defense units, in voluntary army and marine corps, in the Russian equivalent of the U. S. O. and the WAACs. Mrs. Harriman, former United States Minister to Norway, arrived from her home in Rye, N. Y., last night to launch the Russian War Relief Week drive which has set itself a goal of $100,000 for Washington.

"The temporary setbacks in Libya and the Japanese threat aimed at Alaska and our West Coast have brought the urgency of war closer to us," Mrs. Harriman said, "and especially to the women of this country who are ready to do their part. The women of our country can well take a leaf from the book of the women of Britain and Russia. While our hard-pressed allies were holding out, we were—a little complacently, perhaps—living on borrowed time.

"A group of public-spirited Washington women have formed a Russian War Relief Committee in order to further the Nation-wide campaign for medical supplies to be brought here and sent to our ally on the Western Front. I believe the people of the District will respond generously to our call for aid to the nation that has been called one of the strongest links in the United Nations by the President," she concluded.

The Russian War Relief Committee of Washington is planning two outstanding events for this month: An art exhibition of the work of William Gropper at the Chamber of Commerce Building, starting Friday at 5 p. m., and a musical festival at the Water Gate on Tuesday, June 30, at 8:30 p. m.

The Power of TRANSIT ADVERTISING is well known and gratifying to those who use it. RESULTS . . . that is the basic reason for this feeling toward "a good medium, economically priced." Today in Washington, however, the transit advertiser can enjoy the opportuntiy of an added punch which is revolutionary.

WHAT IS THIS "EXTRA MEDIUM"?—it is an opportunity to distribute attractive folders—describing your products or the services of your business—to riders of streetcars and buses in Washington, D. C. These folders, when accordion folded, will be about three and three-quarter inches by seven inches in size. But when unfolded, and printed on both sides, may contain as much advertising space as a quarter page or even a half page in a newspaper.

HOW IS IT DONE?—Each street car and bus in Washington contains a number of metal boxes within easy reach of all passengers. This service is available only to TRANSIT ADVERTISERS and all that is charged to our advertisers for handling and distributing them is $1.50 for every thousand folders . . . and remember, this is not forced distribution—it's purely voluntary, to people who WANT to read your offer.

Paid Benefits Taken Out of War Aid Bill

Relief for Workers At Off-Shore Bases Passed in Senate

The Senate yesterday stripped the civilian war relief bill of comprehensive benefits to individuals injured or killed in enemy raids or blackouts within the United States.

The sharply limited remaining provisions, providing compensation for workmen injured, captured or killed while working for contractors at off-shore bases, then were passed by the Senate without opposition.

Elimination of the broader civilian benefits, ranging from $10 to $85, and encompassing even injuries received in practice blackouts, came by unanimous consent after a bipartisan drive to send the entire measure to the Senate Finance Committee for a more detailed study of blanket costs involved.

Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, who with Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio led the fight for revision of the measure, said a redraft could probably be completed by July 15.

Pepper Offers New Bill

George offered no criticism of provisions for medical care and workmen's compensation for employes at off-shore establishments and Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida promptly moved for passage of that portion of the legislation.

Then Pepper introduced a new bill embodying the general civilian relief features, which was referred to the Finance Committee.

George raised the question of committee jurisdiction. He called it "primarily a pension measure" and argued that all war pension and insurance legislation since the first World War had originated in the Finance Committee.

Taft estimated that even though there was no enemy air raid, between five and six million air-raid wardens and their civilian assistants would be eligible for relief for injuries received in line of duty.

Backed by President

Senator Pepper, author of the legislation, said it "emanated from the President of the United States," and had received careful committee consideration. He said the maximum cost in its present form would not exceed 36 million dollars a year, but offered to accept Taft's amendment eliminating aid to civilian defense personnel injured in practice blackouts.

Pepper later agreed to compromise passage of workmen's compensation features with the understanding that the Finance Committee will proceed to early consideration of the larger issues.

Besides disability payments to air-raid wardens and their assistants for injuries received in line of duty, sections of the bill turned over to the Finance Committee provided:

A wide range of benefits to any civilians who suffer disabilities arising out of the war, to dependents of civilians who are detained by the enemy, and to the surviving dependents of civilians who are killed by reason of the war.

Relief to Communities

Temporary public relief of civilian distress in any community, resulting from enemy attack or danger of attack.

With these provisions sidetracked to another committee, the only relief provisions to pass are those extending medical attention and workmen's compensation benefits for injury or death suffered by workmen employed by Government contractors at military, air and naval bases outside the United States. The Government would assume the burden of providing benefits on account of these war-risk hazards. Employers and their insurance carriers will continue to assume the liability for benefits for normal industrial injury and death.

New Guide Lists War Agencies

Fifty-four pages designed "to get the right man to the right place in a minimum of time" have been released by the United States Chamber of Commerce in the form of a revised, up-to-date directory of war agencies, giving names, addresses and full particulars. The first such directory was issued about two months ago.

Seventy-five agencies, 193 subagencies, and 2564 officials are listed in the new guide.

So complete is the information that it requires four pages of index to catalog the various departments alphabetically.

Prepared under the direction of Edward L. Bacher, manager of the chamber's war service division, the directory is being sent to war service committees in chambers of commerce and trade and industrial associations.

Reduced Goal Of $106,566 for Symphony Won

The National Symphony Orchestra's "reduced goal" for the 1942-1943 season was reached yesterday with $106,566.85 contributed, it was announced by E. R. Finkenstaedt, campaign chairman.

The original goal of $114,000 is still regarded as the ultimate aim of the committee's efforts, so that a longer winter season may be planned.

"The drive has been our most difficult campaign, not because of lack of interest but because of reduced man power among our workers," J. P. Hayes, manager, said. "Many of our volunteers have been involved in Red Cross activities or have been taken into some branch of the service."

Rehearsals for the winter season will begin November 2 and the actual season opens at Constitution Hall November 8.

Preparations Perfected For Crying in Your Beer

The Low Down on High Roof's 'East Lynne;' Capital to Get Taste of All-Star Vaudeville; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THURSDAY NIGHT, "EAST LYNNE."

If you haven't happened to run across that old, familiar, ten-twent-thirt billing of the ancient tear-jerker with which the Willard Roof Stock Company is cracking open its season in the large ballroom atop the corner of Fourteenth and the Avenue come day after tomorrow, it may be because this "Gay Nineties" business is not going to be any ten-twent-thirt enterprise.

HELEN HAYES

For the benefit of the present generation, it might be all right to note at this point that ten, twenty and thirty cents—gallery, balcony and orchestra circle—in those dear, maligned, old horse-and-buggy days, represented the normal scale of "popular priced" entertainment. Imagine!

The times, money and the high-cost-of-everything being what they are, the flat $1.65 per head, including tax, to be assessed at the Willard amounts to practically the same sort of bargain. Especially when you take into consideration the fun of the thing. No formal seating in steam-heated orchestra chairs riveted into rigid immobility. Seating will be around tables, music hall fashion, and the only way you can reserve a definite seat location is to charter an entire table of given passenger capacity.

To insure something convenient to cry into during the soggier periods of such lachrymose items as "East Lynne," for example, beer will be served in tall, cool tankards. After the run of Thursday's inaugural attraction is out of the way, the regular opening night of new bills will be Tuesday, with the given play to continue through Saturday. Curtain time will be 8:45 nightly. No matinees.

Those still able to get about without stepping on their long, white beards will recognize this as a recrudescence of the policy that operated so successfully during the run of "The Drunkard," years back.

The acting company, under the direction of Richard Midgely, which Harry P. Somerville, the P. T. Barnum among the local bonifaces, will break out Thursday night, will have Jane Middleton as its star. A graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, Miss Middleton initiated her professional career at the age of 5, when, under the name of Jane Wray, she appeared in pictures with Charles Ray, May McAvoy, Mary Astor and others of the celluloids' celebrities. At present, she is under contract to RKO-Radio, under the name of Jane Walsh. Anyhow, she likes the name "Jane." On Broadway she was the second lead in "Summer Wives" and for two seasons was leading woman at the Cape Theater, Cape May, N. J., where, among other things, she appeared opposite Michael Whelan—who almost played the Olney with Claire Luce not so long ago—in "Craig's Wife." She also was featured at the Cambridge (Mass.) Summer Theater, with Anna Sten and Ramon Novarro. Featured with her in "East Lynne" will be Ellen Love and that Washington favorite of "The Drunkard" days, Isham Keith, back to the races after a long absence.

More Bands Will Play and Trumpets Bray!

To the list of popular bands articled for the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater, add the name of Tony Pastor and His Orchestra. It seems no longer ago than yesterday—maybe because that's when it was—that something was said here about the Dorseys and Vaughn Monroe and their boys being headed toward F Street in July. Managing Director Gene Ford's foam-flecked courier now dashes in with dispatches to the effect that, while no definite date as yet has been set, Mr. Pastor and his cohorts may be expected to show up somewhere in the wake of the others. Probably in August, if that isn't too long to wait. Or even if it is.

For those disinclined to hurry in hot weather, it should be comforting to know that Ernest Hemingway's idyllic love story of the last war, "A Farewell to Arms," with Helen Hayes and Gary Cooper costarred, will continue for a third week on the screen at the Little Theater. And over at the Cross Roads Theater, at Bailey's Cross Roads, in Virginia, "Papa Is All" began its second and final week last night—but with a difference. Catharine Ryan, supplanted by the entirely competent Regina Shigo a week ago as the result of an unfortunate last-minute accident, now, in turn, has supplanted Miss Shigo for the stretch run of the quaint comedy of the Pennsylvania Dutch. It is difficult to conceive of Miss Ryan and Miss Shigo giving identical performances. So the Cross Roads probably will play to many "repeaters" this week.

In commenting on the sudden revival of vaudeville, Ed Wynn seems to have been dangerously near right when he remarked that two-a-day variety hasn't been dead all this time, but only in a dimout. Take the all-star stage bill coming into Loew's Capitol Thursday, for instance. With Jay C. Flippen, Eleanore Whitney, Horace MacMahon, Eddie Hanley and Jane Pickens all signed on the dotted line, every act will be a headliner. Reminds me of the day I strolled into Hammerstein's Victoria, in New York, and caught Cressy and Dayne, James J. Morton, Eva Tanguay, "Rube" Dickerson, The Four Mortons and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barry all on the same bill. They haven't made them like that for years—up to now.

Signs-of-The-Times Note

"A FAREWELL TO ARMS"
"THIS GUN FOR HIRE"

Star of the Willard's First Bill

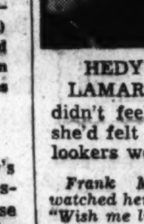

JANE MIDDLETON, experienced actress of both stage and screen, who will be seen in the lachrymose role of Lady Isabel in "East Lynne," inaugural bill of the Willard Roof Stock Co., opening Thursday night in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel. The company will be directed by Richard Midgely in the "Gay Nineties" manner, with the audience seated at tables, presumably sipping something

HEDDA HOPPER

Lurong Lures Lamarr!

Hollywood, Calif., June 22. Whether they call what Hedy Lamarr's wearing in "White Cargo" a sarong or a lurong, the spectators are going to say "S'awright! Boy! She's revealing more sex appeal in this than you ever thought possible. Studio told me Hedy didn't feel very well, but if she'd felt any better, the onlookers would have swooned.

HEDY LAMARR

Frank Morgan said, as he watched her caressing a bull whip, "Wish me luck Hedda. I'm hoping to get my face in one scene." Frank, my boy, you're going to need more than luck, standing the wear and tear before this is over. Why they hadn't thought of putting Hedy in one of these things before is beyond me.

All I ask is that they invite me to the preview when it's shown to soldiers and sailor. That's all I'm asking!

When Darryl Zanuck starts luring, he makes a mighty fine job of it. He's lured that fine novelist, Franz Werfel, to Hollywood as consultant and adviser on his best seller, "The Song of Bernadette."

Joan Crawford's got a mighty entertaining picture in "They All Kissed the Bride." I've always liked Joan. She says, "I love being a star and everything that goes with it. I love the work, the adulation, the people who want my autograph. Some may call it drudgery, but to me it's always been fun."

I wish they'd had more of Bert Lahr in "Ship Ahoy." I'm just a pushover for his brand of comedy, but then so is every New Yorker.

C. B. De Mille played himself yesterday, puttees and all, and was directed by none other than George Marshall in "Star-Spangled Rhythm." It goes without saying that C. B. rewrote the script.

In a scene he did with Betty Hutton, she muffed her lines and said, "I can't help it, he frightens me." At which C. B. said, "Don't worry, honey, I've been rehearsing this fright act for 30 years!"

'Twill ever be a mystery to me why we get foreign directors to do picture like "The Man on America's Conscience." Now, Bill Dieterle is fine. He did a swell job with "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet." But when he's directing, with a heavy German accent, people like Lionel Barrymore, Noah Beery, and Ruth Hussey, who are as American as apple pie, and talking about the bill of rights, it just doesn't make sense somehow.

Only the other day I was asking where Eddie Ellis was. You remember Eddie gave that academy award performance in "A Man to Remember." Well, he's been hiding out on the desert for nine months, and turned down that Woodrow Wilson play on Broadway because of the climate back there. Says he's sorry now, 'cause it was a great play.

I caught him, Donald Meek, and Chill Wills on the "Ox Train" set, with Jimmy Craig and newcomer, Pamela Blake. Donald and I trouped together on Broadway in "Six Cylinder Love" years ago, and I thought he'd retired to his mountain cabin at Lake Arrowhead.

"I did," said he, "but couldn't stand the noises, crickets—not critics—kept me awake!"

Ben Hecht's next picture, which he'll write and produce, is "Voice of Nowhere," the history of a ship. The boat was built in 1910 as a pleasure yacht, ends up as a fishing barge. Story deals with the things the ship has seen, and the events in which it has played an integral part.

Pretty smart of the makers of "Wake Island." They've shot three different endings. Picture will be shown in August, and the ending will depend upon the way the war's going then. It's tough on movie makers trying to outguess the war.

William Saroyan's last play, as of this moment, is "A Decent Birth, a Happy Funeral," and he wants his actor friend, Gene Kelly, for the Broadway production.

But Metro feels Kelly's going to make a hit with Judy Garland in "For Me and My Gal," and they can't spare him for more than eight weeks, if at all. The Kellys, incidentaly, are expecting a baby in October.

Broadway Signboard

New York, June 22.

MOVIES: Jean Negilescu, the movie director, recently did a Government movie which will be called "This Is Your Enemy." It features Nazi war films captured by the British. Archibald MacLeish wrote the foreword and appears in the introduction to the film . . . Negilescu went to Washington to photograph MacLeish. "Last night I telephoned my girl and asked her to marry me," the director told MacLeish. "She asked me what I was doing in Washington and I mentioned that I was going to make a movie of you. She became excited and said you're her favorite poet. So at the end of your scene in this movie I'd like you to add this line to her, saying, 'I advise you to marry Jean.' I'll send that reel to her and then, when we're married, I promise to name the first child after you" . . . "You mean 'Archibald Negilescu?'" asked MacLeish . . . "Yes," said the director . . . "That sounds awful," said MacLeish. "So I won't do it."

HERBERT MARSHALL

BOOK DEPT.: Some years ago John Gunther wrote a novel about Vienna. It never was published because the publishers feared it was libelous—that the libeled person was the Viennese correspondent, who was thinly disguised in that novel . . . That newspaperman was Robert Best—the Viennese correspondent who has become an American traitor and who now is making pro-Nazi broadcasts from Germany.

ART: Arthur Szyk is the Polish artist whose anti-Axis cartoons have appeared on the front covers of Collier's and other magazines and in newspapers throughout the world. He was driven from Poland by Nazis hate and the warning that the hangman's waiting for him . . . But the hangman never got him, for he fled from Europe in time . . . Szyk recently met Eleanor Roosevelt. "Oh yes, Mr. Szyk," said Mrs. Roosevelt, extending her hand, "we have you hanging in the White House" . . . He shuddered, and Mrs. Roosevelt added, "your work, I mean." She was referring to some of his George Washington paintings, completed while peace was still on earth.

SPEECH DEPT.: Gregory Ratoff, the Russian director, met Herbert Marshall and spoke to him at great length. Marshall then tried to mimic Ratoff's accent. "Leesen, my frand, h'arr you mekking fonn of my Henglish?" asked Ratoff . . . "On the contr'ry," replied Marshall. "You're making fun of mine."

SOCIAL NOTE: Mike Romanoff was introduced to C. V. "Sonny" Whitney. Their host presented them this way: "Mr. Romanoff—Mr. Whitney" . . . "Which Mr. Whitney is he?" asked Mike . . . "Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney," said the host . . . "Oh," shrugged Mike haughtily, "the WRONG Whitneys."

LOST AND FOUND: The September Book-of-the-Month will be Marjorie Diamant's "Days of Ofelia." This is only the second book written by this author. She had so much confidence in her ability that she published the first book herself . . . She was confident, too, that "Days of Ofelia" would be a best-seller, but a number of publishers rejected it, until Houghton, Mifflin accepted the novel . . . Four months ago, when the editors of the Book-of-the-Month Club selected Miss Diamant's book, they tried to reach her, but couldn't. She had moved, without leaving a forwarding address. But when the selection was announced the author telephoned. "I called for only one reason," she stated. "To congratulate you on your choice."

RADIO: Cecil Brown, the veteran radio correspondent—who will make a full, uncensored report of his recent experiences in a book, "Suez to Singapore"—now has a new job, one of the most coveted in radio. Brown will succeed Elmer Davis, making the C. B. S. five-minute broadcasts.

THEATER: Ferenc Molnar, the Hungarian playwright, was reminiscing about the bad plays he had seen. Some New Yorkers tried to convince him that in New York last season were presented two of the worst plays in the world . . . "I saw the worst play in Budapest," Molnar insisted. "It was so bad that at the end of the first act they had to give out passes for the second act."

SPORTS: Irving Jaffee is the undefeated Olympic and world speed ice skating champion. He toured Europe, as a member of American teams, until he became a professional . . . Last week Jaffee's family accompanied him to the United States Coast Guard and watched him enlist . . . As soon as he took the oath Jaffee said: "Well, I'm on Uncle Sam's team again."

Walter Reed Convalescents Enjoy a Show

(Ed. Note: The following communication, just to hand, from a former confrere on the drama desk of a leading Washington newspaper, hardly needs elaboration as a reflection of the service the theater and its people are rendering our uniformed men in camps and hospitals. Multiplied by thousands, it expresses a national point of view.)

Walter Reed Hospital, June 21.—Nelson: I wish you could have been here today. I wish you could have been here for two reasons. First, to see Sheila Barrett tear a soldier-boy hospital wide open; and second, to see how a soldier-boy hospital audience—some in casts, on crutches, in wheelchairs and all in red Army convalescent suits—reacts to entertainment of this kind. For it is people like Miss Barrett and soldiers like this audience that are helping to carry the war over the hurdles.

SHEILA BARRETT

And the fact that artists of this caliber, who came with Gene Ford's excellent company from the Capitol Theater, were willing to give up their Sunday gravy and chicken and jump out to Walter Reed during their well-earned lunchtime, is proof that the theater is doing its bit in the wide open cities as well as in the wide open camps, and that the country still has room for laughter and smiles in a world where the opposite only too often seems to be true.

Today, in this great Red Cross Hall, which is dedicated to freedom and charity and to the entertainment of soldiers who may have been in the front line of Bataan, or China, or Australia, or in outposts where Sheila Barretts take on the form of Eskimos, the Capitol Theater presented the sort of revue that is most popular with a soldier. This means that there was a flock of neatly-limbed girls, tripping a mean "fantastic;" that there were comedians who weren't afraid to deliver their punches; that there were songs punctuated with spice and good looks and, finally, a star who took all but the chandelier with her!

The Boys Ate It Up!

I only hope that this excellent company, which got only malted milk for its Sunday luncheon, realizes what "oomph" and good hope it left behind. There were cheers in the high vaulted room for Billy Wells and the Four Fays, as they leaped through the air with the greatest of ease; there were whistles and howls (of appreciation) for Arthur and Morton Havel; the Three Hylton Sisters brought down the house with their "Would You Rather Be a Colonel with an Eagle on His Shoulder, or a Private with a Chicken on His Knee?" and the 16 Rrythm Rockets, whose brief dresses and accentuated feathers in their hats brought forth further whistles, could have danced 'til kingdom come!

Finally, there was Miss Barrett—and she is tops for any sort of Army entertaining. Far removed from her world-wide New York glamour, she still holds the audience in the cup of her hand and, knowing what a soldier wants, she gives it to him. And how!

I'm writing this to you, Nelson, in the hope that these well-deserving performers will realize how deeply appreciative was this Sunday audience of men who right now are not, perhaps, on the crest of the wave. A little entertainment such as this makes the world look brighter, makes fighting perhaps easier, revives memories that are surely not to be gone forever.

And so, to Miss Barrett, and Billy Wells, and the Rockets and Arthur and Morton Havel, and the charming Hylton Sisters, a thousand thanks for a happy Sunday afternoon—as also to the Red Cross and the Capitol Theater, which made this possible. Sincerely, E. DE S. MELCHER, Sergeant, U. S. A.

Halifax Sees Victory Despite Bad News From War Fronts

By A. F. Littlejohn

Associated Press Staff Writer

Asheville, N. C., June 22.—Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, brought a word of encouragement to the National Governors' Conference here today in the face of adverse war news from Tobruk and other fronts.

Although his remarks to the two score Governors and other representatives of the States present were off the record, the tall, slender diplomat indicated in an informal interview that he believed there was no doubt of eventual victory for the United Nations.

The loss of Tobruk was serious, he said, because it gave the Axis forces an advanced base for further operations to the east in Africa, whereas so long as it was in British hands, it was a threat to the German-Italian supply lines. He expressed confidence, however, that Imperial forces would be able to defend Egypt.

He said the loss of Tobruk would not in itself mean a a lengthening of the war, but that the length of the war would depend largely upon the shipping situation of the United Nations.

Interested in Stassen Plan

Lord Halifax expressed interest in a suggestion by Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, chairman of the conference, that some sort of an association of free peoples of the world might develop from the war, functioning somewhat upon the basis of the various States in the Federal Union.

Speaking of its appropriate functions, Stassen said, "it might well administer the great international airports of the future; the gateways to the seven seas; a program to increase the literacy of the peoples of the world; a code of justice for the relations between nations and a machinery to enforce it; temporary governments over the Axis nations; a program of increased trade, regulated to prevent sharp fluctuations in volume which cause economic depressions; and a world legion, to maintain stability in the administration of each of these responsibilities, to prevent the arming of nonparticipation nations, and to prevent armament races or a return to the dangerous "balance of power" principle.

Tonight the Governors and their official parties were guests of honor at a state dinner addressed by Dr. A. Loudon, Ambassador from the Netherlands, and Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese Ambassador.

Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois said that if the States were to justify their future importance in the Federal system, they must not, "by either economic or administrative weakness, abdicate their rightful responsibilities."

"We must meet this challenge both during and after the war emergency," he said.

Earlier a message to the Governors from President Roosevelt said that within the days and months to come the peoples of the world would determine "by their work, by their sacrifices and through the instrumentalities of their armed forces whether generations to come shall live and work as free men or slave states."

After reciting work of the States to date in the war effort, the President said:

"I wish to take this opportunity not only to express my appreciation, and that of the Nation, to the Governors and the several States for the aid and assistance which they have contributed during these trying times, but to express my unwavering confidence that the Nation, the States, the counties, and the municipalities all composed of the same people—Americans—will press on to victory."

Slaying Penalty

Miss Webb Begins Life Prison Term

By the Associated Press

Bedford Hills, N. Y., June 22.—A curtain of obscurity which the law says must last for life fell today on Madeline Webb, the small-town girl who went wrong in the big city.

She had sought bright lights and a stage career. Instead she found only the despair of a life sentence for participating in murder.

The 20-year-old Stillwater, Okla., girl, convicted with two men for the slaying in a New York hotel of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, a refugee, entered the gates of the Westfield State Prison here before noon, after an hour's train ride from Grand Central Station in New York.

For the first ten days, prison officials said, Miss Webb will spend her time accustoming herself to prison routine after which she will be given work best suited to her abilities.

Her two accomplices in the murder, Eli Shonbrun and John D. Cullen, both have been sent to Sing Sing's death house, where they are due to be electrocuted July 30, but may not be, since it is probable appeals will be taken.

Miss Webb was taken quickly by automobile to the station from the women's house of detention in Greenwich Village, where she had been confined since early March. She seemed to be composed and exhibited none of the hysteria which marked her trial.

An attendant, however, said she had spent a restless night and several times cried out for Shonbrun, who sought unsuccessfully at the trial to clear her of any connection with the slaying.

Senate Relents, Again Votes Revolving Fund for TVA

The Senate late yesterday formally receded from an amendment designed to strip the Tennessee Valley Authority of its revolving fund and sent the $2,090,885,128 independent offices appropriations bill containing TVA funds to the White House.

Earlier in the day, the House had receded from an amendment designed to prohibit payment of any of the funds as salary to Goodwin Watson, head of the foreign broadcast section of the Federal Communications Commission.

The fight over the Senate amendment, proposed by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee to alter TVA's financial procedure ended last week when Senate conferees agreed to recommend abandonment of it, to permit early enactment of the appropriations bill.

Senator McKellar told interviewers, however, that he would take other action soon in his effort to confine TVA expenditures to appropriations voted by Congress. At present the Authority may use receipts from the sale of power in its operations.

The independent offices bill carries $136,100,000 to finance TVA's dam construction program the next fiscal year. In addition, the Authority retains the right to use power deceipts estimated at 36 million dollars for the next year, as well as funds remaining from the current fiscal year's appropriations on June 30.

Senate Passes Bill to Give Sub Officers 25% Raise

The Senate passed and sent to the White House yesterday a bill authorizing a 25 per cent increase in pay for naval officers assigned to submarine duty. Another provision would authorize a $5-an-hour bonus for Navy divers engaged in hazardous undertakings or who must submerge more than 90 feet.

At almost the same time, the House passed and sent to the Senate emergency legislation setting aside the peacetime officer-selection system of the Navy and the Marine Corps and permitting temporary promotions during the war.

Officers given temporary promotions would revert to their original status after the war unless recommended for permanent promotion by regular selection boards.

Nathaniel Luttrell Estate Is Valued At $1,258,137

Nathaniel H. Luttrell, retired businessman and one of the directors of Woodward & Lothrop, Inc., left an estate valued at $1,258,137, according to a petition for probate of his will filed yesterday in District Court.

The estate was bequeathed in equal shares to his daughter, Mrs. Nancy Lee Orme, and his son, Nathaniel H. Luttrell, jr. Executor of the will is the Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Approximately $1,100,000 of the estate is in the form of stocks and bonds, the remainder consisting of real estate.

Mr. Luttrell, who died here June 10, was the son-in-law of Alvin M. Lothrop, one of the founders of the department store firm bearing his name as a partner. He served with United States fighting forces abroad during the First World War.

Tydings Asks Press Agent Investigation

Salaries and output of all Government press agents and information staffs would receive close Congressional scrutiny under provisions of a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland.

Designed to stop the "uncontrolled flood of publicity material pouring from the executive branch of the Government," the measure stipulates that a definite congressional appropriation or authorization would have to be obtained for all "publicity and related activities."

This portion of the bill would become effective July 1, 1943, but it is also provided in the measure that beginning July 1 of this year, all agencies of the executive branch would file with the Congressional Joint Committee on Printing a copy of all publicity material and releases.

Books, pamphlets, magazines, booklets, circulars, periodicals, releases, scripts, speeches, recommendations, reports and other "similar or analogous documents or material" distributed to the public would be covered in this provision.

As a means of getting at the "cost and other ramifications" of the Government publicity picture, the bill would make it mandatory for appropriations hereafter made for the Government agencies to state specifically: amounts for purchasing duplicating, printing, and "auxiliary" equipment; salaries paid all persons engaged in the operation of such equipment; salaries of all persons engaged, in whole or in part, in the preparation of any publicity material; the amount, including salaries and all other expenses, connected with the dissemination or distribution of such material to the public.

Senator Tydings introduced the measure following his study as chairman of the Senate special committee created to investigate departments and agencies of the executive branch of the Federal Government. It was referred to the appropriations committee, which is expected to report it promptly and favorably.

Knowing Ourselves

What is wrong with American education is being asked again as a result of the revelation that only 18 per cent of our colleges and universities require the study of United States history as prerequisite to a degree. Only 28 per cent require it for admission. The result is that students may go through high school and college without any instruction at all in the history of their own country. Such are the findings of a Nation-wide survey conducted by the New York Times, and they are calculated to shock the sensibilities of a good many patriotic Americans.

The temptation is strong to conclude that the 82 per cent of our institutions of higher learning that do not require the teaching of United States history ought to mend their ways and put the subject on the compulsory list. But that is not the way to arouse genuine enthusiasm for the study of American history and American institutions. As spokesmen for such outstanding colleges as Williams and Mount Holyoke and for Princeton University point out, a required course is quite likely to arouse student hostility. Futhermore, required courses are apt to be difficult to conduct because of the lack of selectivity and overcrowding.

Since it is our aim to inculcate understanding and appreciation of our American heritage in the boys and girls of the country, the great majority of whom do not advance beyond high school, it would seem that the emphasis on teaching of United States history ought to come in the lower schools. While such teaching is necessarily elementary, it can be made adequate.

The really shocking fact brought out by the Times survey is not the absence of required courses in American history in our colleges. It is the extremely small percentage of students registered for such courses compared with the enrollment for European and world history courses. This record indicates a lack of interest in our own history which should act as a challenge to educators. It by no means follows that the student body should be driven into classrooms and drilled in the history of their country. Neither should the study of United States history be made an occasion for lauding the virtues of democracy and the vices of totalitarianism. The study of history at the college stage calls for critical, dispassionate appraisal of our own institutions, as well as those of other peoples. Any serious student of our history knows that we have nothing to fear from such a critical approach and much to gain by viewing ourselves objectively.

Japanese "Gesture"

The submarine shelling of Vancouver Island and of the Oregon coast may have been nothing more than a defiant Japanese gesture to remind us that, in spite of our victory off Midway, the West Coast is still subject to surprise attack. If this was indeed the purpose of the shelling—which, like the shelling of the California coast some months ago, caused little damage—we might for once accommodate the Japanese by taking the more recent shelling seriously. There is not much doubt that we have tended to exaggerate the significance of the Midway engagement. True, it was a devastating setback for the enemy. But it would be folly to suppose that Japan's striking power, in the central and even the eastern Pacific, is no longer an effective threat.

Lieutenant General Emmons, commander of the Hawaiian Department, certainly has no illusions on this score. He has just urged all civilians in Hawaii, who are not engaged in essential war work, to return to the mainland. Moreover, he has emphasized that the Battle of Midway has given many people a false sense of security. "To assume the enemy will not return in force and utilize every weapon at his disposal," says General Emmons, "is the most dangerous kind of wishful thinking."

Nor have we any right, on the basis of available news, to feel overcheerful about the situation in the Aleutians, the pathway to the North American Continent. So far, according to the Navy, our operations there have been restricted "by considerations of weather and great distances." Such considerations, however, have not prevented the Japanese from inching along the Aleutians and establishing themselves at Kiska, 275 miles this side of their original landing on the island of Attu.

It may be, of course, that our naval forces will undertake to halt the Japanese before they progress much farther toward our base at Dutch Harbor. But a Japanese advance in force along the Aleutians has always figured high up on our list of strategic defense problems in the Pacific. We can ill afford, therefore, to deprecate either Japanese operations in the Aleutians, or, for that matter, the threat of repeated attacks on American territory farther south.

Tobruk And After

The disaster in Libya is a disaster for the United Nations. It would be compounding Hitler's victory if we allowed ourselves to belittle British arms. There is nothing wrong with the fighting spirit of the British soldier. In Malaya, in Burma, and in Libya his heroism has been beyond all praise. What he lacks is the leadership, the organization, and the mechanical aid which so far have accounted for Axis victories. This is a problem for the United Nations. If we allow ourselves to be sidetracked into idle recrimination, we shall simply be inviting the situation of Lot's wife. In other words, we must look back at Libya only for lessons to correct.

The primary cause of the debacle is the superior generalship of Rommel. Here is perhaps the greatest military leader that this war has yet produced. He seems to be great enough to have made good soldiers even out of the Italians! Nothing can be done to offset this Axis advantage except to use every effort to see that we get the best military leadership available in the United Nations. In this respect we can learn from Germany. The German army is the only institution in the world today where authority and rank and position are determined purely on merit. It is to General Marshall's great credit that he made room at the top for younger men of promise when war broke out. The British are more tradition-bound. The result was that in Libya there was apparently only one man who could even approach Rommel's genius. That was General O'Connor. He, alas, was captured when Rommel, after being pushed back to El Agheila at the end of January, turned on his pursuers. The capture is said to have been one of those pieces of bad luck that may happen even to a great commander. But it left the British with leaders both in the field and at Cairo who seem to have been as short of the mark in their tactics as in their communiques.

Less difficult to remedy than the finding of a military genius of Rommel's caliber are the mistakes in organization and mechanization. Logistics is the key word for Nazi organization—that science which makes for the adjustment of supply and other problems to the needs of a dynamic tactical operation. It is said that when Hitler, a devotee of military detail, is told of the amount of supplies needed for a given operation, he does not okay the operation till the amount has been doubled. This attention to logistics is, indeed, doubly important in mechanized war. In the old days horse and man could always carry on even when rations were short, but a tank has no such reserve power. It simply comes to a stop when the fuel gives out.

There also appears much to be learned from the Germans in the material of mechanized war. We of the United Nations do not yet seem to have the last word either in tanks or antitank guns. The Nazis have. Our M3—the so-called General Grant—evidently was no barrier to General Rommel. Whether our M4—the so-called General Lee—will do better remains to be seen. However that may be, it is our job at once to profit by the mechanical lessons which are available from the fiasco at Libya. No matter how well men fight, they cannot make any impression when they are given weapons which the Nazis are apt to make as antiquated as the horse and buggy. Resilience on the production front is every whit as necessary as resilience in strategy.

It is said that the setback in Libya will change the strategic plans which have been hatched among our high strategists for six months back. That would be a grave misfortune. There must be resilience in strategy, but we should be compounding Hitler's victory if we allowed Hitler again to make us follow his strategy and fight on his own battle plan. Specifically, if there has been any plan for the opening of a second front in Europe this year, there should be no deviation from it. For any such plan must have been predicated upon the possibility of a reverse in North Africa. Our best hope of beating the Axis is to hew to a line as direct as may be to the enemy and stick to it.

Love In The A. E. F.

The War Department, in its bluff fashion, has served notice on the maids of Iceland, Ireland, Australia, and wherenot, that henceforth they are not to consider incoming American troop transports as romantic invasions. This, to be sure, is our own interpretation of the order forbidding American soldiers outside continental United States to marry without the approval of commanding officers. We take it for granted, naturally, that the Army is bent on developing maximum striking power. But has the Army really thought this thing through?

Competition, after all, is a necessary stimulant to top performance. And now, in the trying period of adjustment before the men go into action, there is to be no competition—not, at least, in love. Our feminine allies are given to understand—quite ungallantly, to our way of thinking—that we consider Cupid to be a scheming little Fifth Columnist.

Doubtless this doesn't matter to those authorities who have been worried about the social and economic implications of hasty war marriages abroad. But what about the men who have to fight? What is to be their answer when their pretty escorts inquire: "What are your intentions?"

Silver Myth

The sedulous manner in which the myth of silver is maintained by the silver bloc in Congress was illustrated again in the refusal of the Senate's bloc to allow any silver to leave the country.

Secretary Morgenthau had urged that permission be given him to make some of our hoard of silver available to friendly foreign nations under the lend-lease arrangement. Doubtless the British, as in the last war, want silver for India, where silver is always in demand in the absence of trusted banks for storing savings. And there are more savings in India because the people are enjoying good times from war work. Here is an excellent opportunity for us to put our idle silver to work. As we have said before, silver, like all our other metals, should be enlisted in a war which requires the fullest utilization of our human and material resources.

But the silver Senators are not war-minded in approaching the problem of releasing silver for useful purposes. They are silver-policy-minded. Already they have turned a deaf ear to Mr. Nelson's plea that silver in the Treasury stock should be used in the synthetic rubber plants. Silver is required as coating for the alcohol vats. But, as soon as the question was raised and unanswered as to how the silver could be retrieved again to rest idly at West Point, the Senators balked.

That is how the question of lend-leasing our silver was initially approached. Would it be returned? Of course, it would be returned if the Treasury made an arrangement to that effect with the would-be borrowers. Anyway, it is to the interest of the silver-mining industry to spread the use of silver, surely. If we refuse to encourage silver consumption at home, we ought to encourage consumption abroad. India is such a good market for silver that it is next in importance to the United States in the use of the white metal. If we do not take advantage of such opportunities as Secretary Morgenthau presented, we shall find that one of these days our silver-hoarding policy will drive the metal out of use in India as a store of value, as that policy drove it out of use in China as a standard of value.

But the controlling Senatorial argument against any such use of our idle silver was that it might be employed after the war to debase our own standard currency. How? The silver bloc does not say. They are content to leave the impression in the public mind that silver is of monetary significance. Thus they keep up a myth—a myth which incidently finds a wierd exposition in our adjoining correspondence columns from Representative White—at the expense of both the war effort and of silver itself. For they are engaged in robbing silver of its natural markets at home and abroad.

Sevastopol

The Nazis are willing to squander great numbers of men and vast quantities of material to get Sevastopol because the capture of that great Black Sea base would enable Hitler to use the Crimea for an assault on the Caucasus and thus would constitute another step forward in the great Nazi encirclement strategy. This strategy envisages the Allies caught in a great Nazi vise the arms of which stretch across North Africa on the one hand and from the Ukraine and the Crimea into the oil-rich Caucasus and the Middle East on the other.

The success of such a plan would not only deprive Russia of its naval power in the Black Sea. It would cut her off from indispensable oil supplies needed by her army, her industry and her agriculture. Hitler on his part would be enabled to fill his depleted oil tanks. Moreover, he would at last have a foothold in Asia from which a junction with the Japanese would become possible.

It may be too late to prevent him from achieving his objective in the Crimea. But the Russians are determined to exact every last ounce of flesh and drop of blood from the Nazi invaders before relinquishing, if finally they are forced to relinquish, the Crimea base. And they can be expected to fight on new lines, as they have done repeatedly after the loss of other bastions.

EVENING AL FRESCO: MID-SUMMER'S DAY, SWEDEN
(My mother relates.)

No revelry has voice enough to bush
This stillness that is night, all luminous
In Midnight sun instead of stars and moon.
The waterfall still booms its rush,
Unswed tonight as when its creaminess
Is silver with the salmon mad to spawn.
Below, the lake admits the falls:
Some tethered boats resist and stir,
The spray a sheaf of comets overhead.
And dancers form mosaics on the malls
Where music born of native troubadour
Salutes the night, all rhythms understood.

Statesman's Job

Here we have this awful war. We have had wars before, and when they were over the causes remained uncorrected. We ought now by all means—and I assert this no matter how offensive to prevailing habits of thought—we ought by all means to change our industrial organization, and above all change our habits of thinking, so as to give every one a chance to earn a living, and to receive the results of his work. I do not say merely that he should have a chance to get a position. Mere employment does not fill the bill.

No, there should be opportunity for every person to draw good pay, provided he works diligently. And it should not at all be necessary that he should make a profit for employers. For somebody to make a rakeoff called profit is not the primary object of carrying on business. Profit is something that comes in the course of business. It is simply an incident of the way we have things organized.

To say that we should have it so that all financial resources can be put into profitable investment, and that then—only then—prosperity for all will naturally follow, is absurd. Take it the other way around. Fix it so that everyone will receive good pay, provided he works well, and then let the profit come naturally. If that seems like a contradiction, let the statesmen, the industrial statesmen, think out a way to make this come true.

We have the men and the materials. All we need is the "know how." The money is merely a part of the "know how." Our statesmen should supply that. If they cannot, let them go back and sit down. Our statesmen and businessmen are smart enough to do anything that needs to be done. To lick Hitler, and to lick poverty.

The other night some friends of mine visited me. It had been a lovely evening, but shortly before it was time for them to leave, a heavy rain began to fall.

For the convenience of my guests, I tried to call a taxi to take them home. Imagine my surprise when, out of my calls to two different taxi companies, all I got for my trouble were two very rude answers to my questions. And in each case the person who answered hung up before I had finished talking.

Is there any need for such bad manners? Also, how does a stranger in this city arrange to have a taxi call at his door, or don't the taxi companies want such business? We are accustomed to civil replies and courteous service "back home" and wonder why we can't get the same here. Will someone please explain?

Postwar Policy

While the present struggle has revolutionized traditional methods of waging war, our minds continue in a groove when it comes to methods of making peace. Of this we see evidence in the current talk of leaving consideration of definite reconstruction problems to await a postwar armistice. We seem capable of envisaging the transition from war to peace only as a succession of (1) an outright military victory, (2) an armistice during which the enemy remains under foot while the victors argue upon what to do with him, and (3) the final "peace" terms which the crushed enemy must sign—or else.

This lack of imagination plays directly into Nazi hands. It leaves the German people with no clear alternative to a continued support of Hitler. If the United Nations leaders, in seeking an early and lasting peace, displayed the same freshness of thought as in waging military warfare, they would, in a conference convoked now instead of after the war, immediately undertake the task of framing a comprehensive code. Then, if the benefits of this code were made extensive to any nation willing to undertake its obligations, regardless of the line-up of its erstwhile government in the present struggle, the war-sick German people would have precise foreknowledge of both the privileges and obligations they would acquire from the moment they disassociated themselves from Hitler's dream of world conquest. What is more—and this is important—it would afford them a means of withdrawing from the war without the ignominy of a military defeat.

We may assume that the privileges under the code would include equality of access to world markets. Obligations would include submission of armaments to international control and submission of international disputes to a world tribunal backed by adequate police power. Problems of restitution and reparation could be handled by a special commission set up for that purpose. Mistakes resulting from so early a framing of the code could later be corrected if the code provided machinery for its own amendment.

In public speeches United Nations spokesmen with increasing frequency are advising the German people to throw off their military masters, without, however, suggesting, except in the vaguest terms, what awaits the German people if they take the advice. While this lack of concreteness continues, it is futile to hope that any revolutionary leader within Germany can marshal sufficient support to overthrow the Nazi regime. A different tale might be told could that revolutionary leader hold up before potential followers a clear-cut statement of the lot that would be theirs after they oust Hitler.

Would it not be a good idea to appoint air raid wardens who are calm and inspire confidence, rather than the type that runs wildly about blowing whistles, shouting and acting silly? Some of the workers (male and female) are so loud and act so foolish, one wonders what would happen were there an actual air raid. One would respect, and follow instructions carefully if they were given by one who acted seriously.

Idea Behind The Silver Fight

The fiscal operation of the United States Treasury and the Federal Reserve banks is demonstrating facts of tremendous importance as to the price the people can stand and are paying without question for the creation and use of money; for the use of Federal Reserve money now amounting to well over nine billion dollars in circulation and confined in its initial issue to the demands of interest-paying borrowers under the present scheme which established a train of perpetual interest yield to their banks as long as this kind of money is out of the bank and in circulation.

While many of the individuals through whose hands this money passes in its circulation may not pay interest for its use, the borrower that got it out of the bank does; and, when the time of his loan is up, he must bring the money, or the same amount that somebody else has borrowed, back to the bank along with the interest where the money stays until another borrower repeats the circulation operation. Under this scheme, money cannot circulate on a cash basis because, if everybody was out of debt, there would not be any money in circulation.

As to the cost the American people are unwittingly paying for the most part for the circulation of this kind of money, we will take the nine billion dollar Federal Reserve notes now in circulation and compute the annual interest at 3 per cent, about half of the commercial rate, and we get 270 million dollars a year, just a little part of the total expense paid for the use of a medium of exchange as the cost of having money in circulation. We are told that 90 per cent of business is handled by check, a refined form of barter and less expensive, unless based on bank deposits obtained by securing a bank loan, and, in that case, the interest expense comes into play in another way.

A more striking example of what the people's need for the money function can do is the simple way the Government silver purchase program is financed which is now being so vociferously and strenuously opposed by the country's financial interests. Silver is obtained on the average of around half its money value, as presently used, and is readily accepted by the public in transacting business, in the form of silver dollars or silver certificates at their money value of $1.29 1-3 per ounce as revalued by the Treasury for monetary use while the Treasury maintains a self-imposed limit of only issuing silver money up to the cost of the silver it buys. The Treasury's profit (seigniorage) now stands in the form of 1,358,814,759.0 ounces of idle silver held in reserve in its vaults, metal that the money-using public has paid for by accepting and using silver certificates. This idle silver did not cost the Treasury anything except the storage and administration expense. The people paid for it by accepting the money they are now using in the everyday transaction of business.

When we calculate the interest on the two billion dollars in money that bypassed the interest-gathering mechanism of the Federal Reserve banks amounting to 60 million dollars a year on the same basis we figured the interest on the Federal Reserve notes at 3 per cent, we find a big leak in bank interest income. Now with a nightmare of fear that the Secretary of the Treasury may weaken in the war emergency and put the other half of the idle silver the people have paid for to work as money by revaluing the metal, as he did the first half, and putting it in circulation in paying some of the Government's mounting expenses, the hue and cry is raised on every side against any such preposterous proposition and the economists come streaming forth from their lairs with tom-toms to sound the tocsin and call forth the stalwarts to the fray—"Silver shall not pass current as money."

The Post Impressionist

Then—And Now

It was hot in Washington—that summer of 1918. Hot and busy and confused; eager and urgent and flaming with patriotism.

The vanguard of warworkers had come in many months before, but they were still streaming in. Buses were not yet in transcontinental passenger service, and every train brought its quota of eager-eyed girls, flushed with patriotism, with the thought of helping their country in the only way they could—and of course, with the zest for adventure but poorly camouflaged by their patriotic gesture.

Temporary buildings were then—as now—cluttering up the landscape in the vicinity of Four and a half, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth and C Streets Southwest. But then the alphabet had given up only four or five of its letters to temporary buildings; it hadn't been exhausted as now.

These buildings were three stories in height; they were flimsily and hastily constructed of stucco over boards. There was no such thing as air-conditioning. And they were crowded with workers—girls for the most part, although there was quite a sprinkling of men, with uniforms to be seen everywhere. It was quite a task keeping track of the rank of the various men in uniform, for lieutenants were made captains overnight, captains were made majors, and as for second lieutenants—there were so many as to be commonplace.

May of 1918 was hot. June was fairly comfortable. It was not until July and August that the full impact of the summer sun was felt in these temporary buildings. But when it really got to work, it was terrific. For as long as three and four days at a time, the thermometers registered as high as 112 and 114 in the top floors of these buildings. The second and first floors were a trifle more comfortable. But none of them was below 95 degrees.

That was war, and there was no dismissing for overheated offices. We just kept right on working, until a good many of us were overcome and had to be carried away in the ambulances which were kept in readiness all through that hot, dry spell.

There was a real shortage of sugar too, and I am sure that the only way some of us were able to carry on during that scorching period, was because we were allowed to make lemonade by the bucketful—if we could get the sugar. Somehow, we always managed to get sugar—mostly brown—and the bucketful of lemonade was made every day. Where we secured the ice, I could not say, but there was always ice for the bucket, and you may be sure that lemonade bucket was a popular rendezvous.

The curious and interesting thing about it, as I recall it now, was that so far as I know, no one had any thought of closing up shop. Everyone complained about the heat, of course, but that was as far as it went. No one thought he or she was being imposed upon by having to work the full day, including Saturdays, and while the heat necessarily slowed up the output, there was still plenty of finished work turned out.

There was one fortunate thing about the lack of air-conditioning though. There was no abrupt change from an air-conditioned office to blistering hot city streets. It was merely moving from a building into the open air, and frequently there would be some relief when one was able to get out into the open.

All through that summer, the heat continued practically unabated. There was crowding here too; just as acute as now, as I recall, for while there were not as many war workers coming into the city, there were not as many available living quarters, either. And there were just the same complaints then as now: the rooms were small; they were insanitary; they were hot; they were too far from the community bathroom; they were exorbitantly high in price; the food was atrocious; one had to stand in line for everything.

Churches were opening their doors then as now to the war workers and the soldiers. But then, the influx of strangers into the city was a novelty and old-time Washington residents were slow to accept the newcomers. Somehow youth has a way of straightening out its own social difficulties, and many of these 1918 war workers found their own special niches and remained to become substantial, outstanding citizens.

Not so much damage was done then as now to the beauty of the city in the building of war buildings. Not so many were built. And many protests were heard because some were located where they were. For instance, when the Government Hotels were built on the Plaza at Union Station, they were the center of much controversy. And as it turned out, they did not prove to be an unqualified success, nor even a blessing to the occupants. For there was much internal friction over the management and over the rules that were laid down for the social conduct of the residents, and when the buildings were finally torn down and the Plaza landscaped into the beautiful park it now is, I venture to say there were no tears shed.

Perhaps if we can but look ahead a few years, we can visualize again a beautiful Capital City with lovely parks, shaded drives, and the spaciousness its planners provided for. In the interim, we must remember that this confusion now existing is just a by-product of war; that eventually we shall return to a normal level; that many of these young women who are thronging our streets after office hours will undoubtedly be assimilated into the future progress of our city. Washington and its beauty are still here—it remains only to be recaptured. And memory has stored in our hearts the loveliness we knew before war made necessary these unflattering changes.

Nazi-Soviet Bombshell

Diary

New York, July 17, 1939.

WHEN the Queen Mary docked today, I found Marjorie on the dock with the girls. Left on the midnight train for Washington. Pursuant to orders of the State Department, I had returned to the United States for conferences.

Diary

Washington, July 18, 1939.

HAD luncheon with the President. He asked my reasons for the confidence with which I predicted that war was immediately imminent through Hitler's aggression and would come either before Hindenburg's birthday in August, or before the Party Rally at Nuremberg in September.

I gave him in specific detail the information which I had received direct from Belgians who had manufacturing plants in Germany and who were in contact with the Nazi party leaders; also the statements which I had received from American businessmen with interests in Germany, whom I had seen just a week before in Belgium, who also had it first-hand from Nazi leaders what was in the making.

He was particularly impressed with what I told him about the expressions of my diplomatic colleagues in Brussels, who were praying for the amendment of the Neutrality Act, in the belief that it might possibly deter Hitler. I asked whether I could be of any help in connection with the neutrality legislation. He said that it might do some good if I saw some of the Senate leaders.

He asked me about the Russian negotiations with Britain and France. I told him frankly that I was very much worried about it. I told him that I was told by a very high and important personage in Europe that Hitler and Ribbentrop were confident they could break Stalin away from England and France. The President told me he had told Ambassador Oumansky, when he was leaving to go to Moscow, to tell Stalin that if his government joined up with Hitler, it was as certain as that the night followed the day that, as soon as Hitler had conquered France, he would turn on Russia.

He discussed the results of a possible Hitler blitzkrieg and its effect on the world, and particularly the United States. He had no illusions as to the tremendous mechanized power of the German army.

Diary

Washington, July 19, 1939.

A CONFERENCE was held last night between the party leaders on both sides and the President and Secretary Hull, looking to some agreement to pass the amendment to the Neutrality Act. According to the press reports, the President advised them of immediate threat of war this summer, and he urged the passage of the neutrality legislation for the effect it would have in making war less likely. The Republican leaders were very positive that Hitler would not attack, and that there was no necessity for haste in connection with the neutrality legislation. So it was agreed that Congress should recess without action thereon.

I nevertheless went up to the office of Key Pittman for lunch with members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. I gave them the situation as I saw it. Senator Pittman stated that had my statement been made to the full committee two weeks earlier, in his opinion, the neutrality legislation may have passed. Of course, the facts are overwhelming.

Diary

Washington, July 27, 1939.

SOL BLOOM, the very able and effective chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, asked me to appear before his committee. The information upon which I based the belief that Hitler would make war on Poland either before August 28 (Hindenburg's birthday) or before September 8 (the Nuremberg Party Rally), I submitted very frankly and fully.

From Report to Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State

New York, August 22, 1939.

(THE Molotov-Ribbentrop agreement was announced in the press on this day.)

My dear Mr. Secretary: With reference to the above-entitled matter, it occurred to me that in view of the background of my service in Russia, my diagnosis and prognosis of the situation might be of some value to you and to the Department.

The development of this nonaggression pact between Russia and Germany to me was not unexpected. My reports from Moscow have pointed out for two years last past that it was perfectly clear that if Europe were to have "peace," it would have to be a "Fascist peace," imposed by the dictators, unless England and France created a countervailing east and west axis, by the inclusion of the Soviets, and established a "balance of power" which would keep peace through an equilibrium of forces.

MOREOVER, it has always been clear that there were many advantages to both Germany and Russia in getting together. They had worked together for ten years and could again.

During the Litvinov tenure in the Foreign Office, there was to be sure a very strong moral impulse of hostility toward Germany and the aggressor powers. During that period the Soviet regime, in my opinion, diligently and vigorously tried to maintain a vigorous common front against the aggressors.

Beginning with Munich, and even before, however, there has been an accumulation of events which gradually broke down this attitude on the part of the Soviet government.

Events Contributing to Fact

DURING my tenure in Moscow I was much impressed with the fact that the Russians were undoubtedly severely irked by what appeared to be a policy of "pinpricking" and an attitude of superiority and "talking down" which diplomatic missions of the Western powers assumed toward the Soviet government. The Soviets are proud and resented this deeply.

The Soviets were "humiliated" and "deeply hurt" by being excluded from Munich.

Out of "appeasement" there grew still greater distrust in either the capacity, the intention, or even the "pledged word" of the Chamberlain government or the Daladier government.

During the Soviet-British-French negotiations, including the sessions of the Strang Mission and Military Missions to Moscow, this distrust was intensified by the fact that these authorities were not clothed with power to close a final, definite realistic alliance.

THE suspicion continued to grow that Britain and France were playing a diplomatic game to place the Soviets in the position where Russia would have to fight Germany alone.

France and England had persisted in a refusal to enter into an unequivocal agreement to support Russia in the protection of Russia's vital interest, in preventing the absorption through internal aggression of the Baltic states, whereas Russia offered unequivocal support to Britain and France to come to their aid if their vital interests were affected by a German attack upon Belgium or Holland.

These events served to feed the suspicion and arouse the dissatisfaction of the realistic Soviet leaders, including Stalin. Apparently they got "fed up" with attempting to stop the aggressors by participation in European affairs, and characteristically boldly reversed their attitude and decided to secure their own position by making a pact of nonaggression with Germany, which would assure peace for Russia, at least for a time, regardless of any possibility of war in Europe.

Effects on European Peace

THE EFFECTS of this new development upon European peace in the immediate present are problematical. My own judgment is that, with the eastern wall securely closed, Hitler will take not only Danzig but the Corridor as well; that he will do this first by diplomatic demand in which there will be neither discussion nor compromise but only ultimatum. Poland will probably wilt, and hope to live to fight another day. If that happens there will probably be no war this year.

If, however, Poland refuses to accede and fights, the question then will be whether England and France will come to her defense. It may be that the rapidity of events will make the entry of Britain and France inevitable. If so "the fat is in the fire."

From any point of view, therefore, it is clear that Hitler has won a smashing diplomatic victory. Britain and France are on the verge of the most disastrous loss of prestige in their history. The peace of Europe, if maintained, is in imminent danger of being a peace imposed by the dictators, under conditions where all of the smaller countries will speedily rush in to get under the shield of the German aegis, and under conditions where, even though there be a concert of power, as I have predicted to you two years ago, with "Hitler leading the band."

New York, August 26, 1939.

THE PRESS announces that the British and Poles have signed a mutual-assistance pact. The horse is already stolen. Up to this date it was a unilateral guarantee which Britain had given to the Poles. Beck, in London last spring, got that "blank check." Litvinov's practical proposal for a conference of all the "nonaggressor states" was rejected, upon the insistence of the Polish and Rumanian governments.

It illustrates the tragic misjudgment of strengths in Europe. Chamberlain placed his confidence in Beck's government and passed up the Soviet strength. The Poles are undoubtedly a brave and gallant people, but from all the information I get, there is too much truth in the essential weakness of Poland. Poland, it is reliably reported, has only 800 airplanes. In terms of present-day military strength, the mechanized equipment and other strengths of the Polish army are negligible.

Among many well-informed men in Brussels, I found little belief in the Polish government because of lack of confidence in Beck. Indicative of this situation, only last spring one of the most prominent officials under Beck, Minister——, stated to me, positively, that his government would not tolerate proposals that Poland and Germany should get together and compose their difficulties over the Polish Corridor and Danzig. He expressed himself as being disgusted with what he called the common exaggeration of Germany's military power.

HIS government, he said, would show them up to the world; within three weeks after the outbreak of war, Polish troops would be in Berlin; the "West Wall" or "Siegfried Line" was nothing but a "cotton line." Poland did not need Russian aid; they could handle the Germans alone and easily.

There appeared to be a complete lack of realism in assessing Germany's strength. It amazed me then and still astounds me. I told him frankly that I thought he was wrong. I feared the time might come when Poland might desperately need any help, including help even from the Soviets, to save itself, and that it was very bad judgment to refuse the water to extinguish the fire which was destroying their house, because of fear that the water would get their feet wet and possibly infect them with a cold.

This mutual-assistance pact should have been made months ago. Everyone in Europe knows that Germany is already mobilized for immediate invasion of Poland. The Germans openly boasted, according to Belgian businessmen who have plants in Germany, that they would "clean up" Poland in three weeks. No one to whom I talked had any confidence that they won't.

TOMORROW: Allies to Enemies

Canadian Labor

By Janet Keith

Weakened By War

THERE IS a significant difference between labor's position under the American anti-inflation program and its position under the Canadian price ceiling. President Roosevelt plans to stabilize wages by mediation; Mackenzie King stabilized them by passing, without consulting organized labor, a government order-in-council freezing all basic wage rates.

Canadian labor isn't altogether happy about the present situation and has presented several briefs to the government suggesting modification of the wage-freezing policy. But it is a voice crying in the wilderness. Organized labor in Canada, never particularly strong, has been greatly weakened by three years of war. Not only has it lost its power to strike and to bargain for higher wages; gradually it is losing the right of union recognition.

CANADA has no Wagner Act. Section 502A of the Criminal Code, which took effect one month before the outbreak of war, seemed designed to protect the worker against dismissal or discriminatory treatment because of union activity. But the ambiguous wording of the section, along with the fact that it is criminal and not civil law, has completely nullified its effectiveness.

After the outbreak of war the government extended the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, which had previously applied to only a small section of industry, to apply to all industry connected with the making of war supplies —about 85 per cent of the national industrial plant. This act provides fairly good machinery for settling wages-and-hours disputes. But its great defect is that it doesn't provide for settling the issue of union recognition. If employers refuse to deal with an employes' union, a board of conciliation is set up. But once set up, the board is powerless to arbitrate on the principle of collective bargaining.

Realizing that something was lacking in its policy of union recognition, the Canadian government passed in the spring of 1940 its famous order-in-council P. C. 2685, which was a declaration of wartime labor policy. Its two main provisions were: "That employes should be free to organize in trade unions, free from any control by employers or their agents," and "that employes, through the officers of their trade union or through other representatives chosen by them, should be free to negotiate with employers concerning rates of pay, hours of labor and other working conditions, with a view to the conclusion of a collective agreement."

Canadian labor hailed this order as an indication that the government was prepared to enforce the principles of union recognition and collective bargaining. But it has become apparent during the last two years that the government used the expression "should be free" advisedly. The government may desire that employes should be free to organize, but it has never taken the firm stand that they shall be free.

Six months later a new order-in-council set up a fixed policy regarding wage increases. At the same time the principles of P. C. 2685 were reaffirmed. But while the legislation regarding restricted wage increases was mandatory, the legislation regarding union recognition was not. Any illusions that it might be were dispelled by a speech made by the minister of labor in June, 1941. "The provisions of that order-in-council are not mandatory; they are simply a recognition that in the opinion of the government this would be the best way to produce satisfactory relations in war time."

FOLLOWING on the heels of the minister's statement came the appointment of a new three-man committee, the Industrial Disputes Inquiry Commission. Its function is to investigate labor disputes and advise the minister whether a board of conciliation should be established. Later legislation gave the commission further powers to settle labor disputes. In settling disputes arising out of claims for trade-union recognition, the policy of the commission has followed a definite pattern: to persuade the workers to abandon their claims for union recognition and accept the one-plant employe committees favored by employers. This was the formula put forward by the commission in the now-famous dispute at the Kirkland Lake gold mines.

If this attitude of the commission represents the true government policy toward union recognition, the future of collective bargaining in Canada looks very black.

This is not to say that organized labor in Canada is dead. Some 370,000 Canadians are union members, most of them belonging to the Trades and Labor Congress (corresponding roughly to the American Federation of Labor) and the Canadian Congress of Labor (the counterpart of the C. I. O.). Eventually these unions will be strong enough to make sure that the principle of collective bargaining is recognized and enforced.

But wartime regulations have come at a critical time in the development of Canadian labor relations. Canada is faced now with a situation comparable to that which existed in the United States following declaration 7A of the National Labor Relations Act. The government has declared for collective bargaining, but is not yet prepared to enforce its declaration. And instead of being able to press for a decision, Canadian labor is hampered by war regulations.

The Canadian laborer is quite willing, like his counterpart in Britain and the United States, to forego higher wages and the right to strike if such restrictions are necessary for an allout war effort. But the British and American laborer has long taken for granted his right to organize. The Canadian laborer is not yet sure of that right, and he cannot see that failure to recognize employes' unions will be of any assistance to the war effort.

Canada's effort on the industrial front has been good, but it will not be as good as it could be until the government takes a firm stand on the principle of collective bargaining. In the words of a recent statement by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada: "The freezing of wages at unfair levels and the denial of the use of the machinery of collective bargaining, conciliation and arbitration is an injustice that stifles enthusiasm and inspiration to greater effort."

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Fire Under The B. P. W.

THE COMMISSIONERS' bill to strip the Board of Public Welfare of its administrative powers has aroused many conflicting emotions. Almost everyone admits that the present setup is not a happy one. The Board of Public Welfare itself took that position in asking the Commissioners to appoint a citizens' committee to study the problem. Indeed, a special board committee pointed out that confusion has existed ever since the board was created in 1925. The recommendations then made to eliminate this confusion have never been adopted. So the opinion that something must be done is almost unanimous.

PUSEY

At present the responsibility for carrying out public welfare programs in Washington is split between the Commissioners and the board in a most illogical way. Certainly this power should be centralized somewhere. But if it is lodged entirely in the board that agency becomes, as indeed it is at present, an isolated segment of public authority operating with little relationship to the rest of the local regime. If welfare is to be handled by an independent branch of government, why should not the public health and police functions be similarly detached? Carrying such an argument to its logical conclusion, we would have not one local government but half a dozen or more. Obviously that is the road to chaos.

The instinctive reaction of the student of government is, therefore, to favor concentration of administrative powers, as the Commissioners propose. Yet there is a great deal of opposition among local citizens to the proposed change. Why? Candor forces one to recognize the fact that many civic groups would rather trust the administration of the welfare system to an unpaid board of citizens than to the Commissioners. Their reasoning seems to be that such a board, even though it is named by the Commissioners, more accurately reflects the public will than do the city fathers themselves.

IF THE COMMISSIONERS were responsible to the people, no such question would arise. But, of course, they are not responsible to the people. And the very fact that many citizens prefer confusion to centralization of local powers in the hands of the city fathers suggests that they have not been as responsive to public opinion as they might have been. This is a point that the Commissioners cannot afford to overlook. If they aspire to be the repository of all local governmental powers in the District, they must certainly put forth a greater effort to ascertain the will of the people and put it into effect.

It does not follow, however, that the Board of Public Welfare has made itself the champion of Washington's voteless residents. When has the board ever made a determined fight to secure legislation or appropriations in which the community is vitally interested? To be sure, it has asked for numerous improvements over a period of years. But its voice has been a weak whisper. Instead of fighting for decent welfare institutions, for adequate food, shelter and clothing for all of the 5000 wards under its care, it has made requests and docilely submitted when they have been cut to pieces by either the Commissioners, or Congress, or both

In other words, the record of the board is not one to bring the community enthusiastically to its defense. It could have wielded a powerful influence in this voteless community, but it has not done so. And one of the chief reasons for its failure in this respect seems to have been its reluctance to bring public business out into the open for public discussion. It has neither spoken for the people, nor to the people. The fact of the matter is that the public knows precious little about conditions in our welfare institutions. Even the scandalous neglect of the Home for the Aged and Infirm a few years ago was exposed by Mrs. Roosevelt, rather than by the board which is supposed to speak for the people in these matters.

NOW one reason for the board's silence is the fact that it could not criticize existing conditions without, in some measure, slapping itself. It lacks the power to make Blue Plains and the Children's Receiving Home first-class institutions because it has no control whatever over welfare appropriations. Yet it has not felt free to exercise the only real power at its command—the power of arousing public opinion.

What Washington needs most of all is a courageous spokesman who is able and willing to tell the truth about neglected institutions, backward training schools and stupid regulations which hamper the administration of welfare activities. A reorganized Board of Public Welfare, freed from administrative responsibility, could most effectively perform this function for the agencies which the board is now trying to serve in a broader capacity. It could get out and fight for the essential improvements in a way that would commend the attention of Congress and voteless citizens.

No one can reasonably argue that the change proposed by the Commissioners would give us an ideal welfare system. So long as the District has no government of its own, talk of an ideal system is nonsense. The best that can be done this year is to patch up the obsolete machinery in a way that is best calculated to overcome the mistakes of the past. At least there would be some advantages in centralizing all authority in the welfare field and in securing a Board of Public Welfare that would become an active champion of the public will. Whether these gains would be offset by unwise administration on the part of the Commissioners cannot be determined in advance.

Some precautions against undue interference with welfare officials could be taken by creating a strong department of public welfare under the general supervision of the Commissioners. There is a wide difference between merely dumping the welfare powers into the laps of the Commissioners to be administered as they see fit and creating a department under them with specific powers and duties. The latter type of organization, to be headed by a trained welfare executive, appears to be necessary if the requirements laid down by the Social Security Board to qualify the District for Federal aid are to be met.

In any event, the District will need an independent agency to explore the tragic conditions existing in many of its welfare institutions, to formulate new policies and to fight for their adoption. If the Board of Public Welfare is not overhauled and redirected into this field, another agency will have to be set up to do the job.

Fair Enough

Anti-Kickback Case

FOUR UNIONEERS of the big A. F. L. shakedown racket called the International Union of Operating Engineers have been indicted by a Federal grand jury in Albany, N. Y., on a charge of extorting $50,000 from a lot of poor, faceless workers employed on a war project known as the Voorheesville Army Depot. The indictments were found under the anti-kickback law which provides a maximum punishment of five years in prison and a $5000 fine for anyone who shall by force or otherwise induce any person employed on any public work financed in whole or in part by the Government to give up any part of the compensation to which he is entitled. I believe this is the first time this law has been thus invoked, although many extortioners have been openly robbing thousands of Americans on most of the war construction jobs all over the country. About a year ago I asked one United States district attorney if this law applied to such racketeering and he said it did not. That, however, was in another district.

The same law has been on the books throughout the vicious program of thievery by shakedown dating from the start of the war effort. The present case may be only a demonstration intended to signify formal disapproval of the racket for political effect in the coming elections. Moreover, if the law applies in Albany it also applies in every other district in the country where the same racket has been operated with the toleration of the Administration. It is significant that both Attorney General Francis Biddle and Tom C. Clark, described as chief of the war frauds unit of the Department of Justice, took occasion to declare that the present indictments were not aimed at labor. That was a gratuitous assurance of obvious political purpose and was out of order. The indictments and the facts will speak for themselves and law officers of the Government serve no legitimate official purpose in making such statements.

OBVIOUSLY labor could not suffer by the punishment of men who victimize labor, so there is no more legitimate excuse for the remarks of Clark and Biddle than there would be for explaining that no attack on religion was meant by the indictment of some leader of the miscalled Christian Front. The racketeers of the unions no more represent labor than Charles E. Coughlin represents Jesus Christ, and the Department of Justice indicts itself for disgraceful default of its plain duty by its sudden use of a law so plainly applicable to practices which have been carried on in so many localities so long.

The so-called Operating Engineers' Union is one of the worst in the whole line-up of rogue unions of the American Federation of Labor. All the wiser and more decent elder statesmen of the A. F. L. know it is rotten and admit among themselves that this is so. For that reason, both Biddle and Clark were guilty of deception when both took pains to say that the international union, parent of the Voorheesville local, was innocent of wrong and, in fact, had ordered the local officials to cease operating a shakedown. The parent union may have done this, but it is a racket of underworld gangsters nevertheless, and I believe both officials know this.

THE PRESIDENT is William E. Maloney of Chicago, a well-known political white-hat or gangster of the union racket, who owned until recently and still may own a large stable of race horses. Maloney controls the licensing system in Chicago by which the city government examines the qualifications of men seeking credentials as engineers. He has been a common mobster for many years. If an applicant refuses to join the union he can be flunked and he can be flunked for any other reason that may seem sufficient to the men controlling the licensing authority. One of the vice presidents is Joe Fay, the notorious drunken thug and racketeer who has grown rich in the union racket and who slugged David Dubinsky at an A. F. L. convention in New Orleans for proposing that crooks be barred from union leadership or control.

More recently Fay was indicted in Syracuse, N. Y., for a brutal assault on another unioneer whom he attacked from behind in a dark hall and injured severely, but the case was dismissed under circumstances which smelled. The complaining witness and victim, by name Orville Warner, disappeared when Fay's trial came up and the case was quickly dismissed on the fraudulent representation that the services of this notorious goon were required by the country in the prosecution of the war. Promptly thereafter, Warner reappeared and was reinstated in his old job as a unioneer in Rochester at a large salary. The case has not been reopened, although a new indictment could be asked and Warner this time could be placed under bond or indicted for altering his original story. Governor Lehman's attention has been called to this scandalous case and the obvious reason why Warner disappeared, but he has done nothing about it.

In view of the record of the parent union, both Biddle and Clark put the Department of Justice in the role of a gratuitous character witness for a notorious rogue. Neither one can plead ignorance because the FBI has that record, which I will present in some detail at an early date to show what sort of gang the Attorney General and the chief of the war frauds unit have singled out for praise.

Nazi Labor Shortage

By Maurice Feldman

Alien Supply Nears Exhaustion

AMERICA'S entry into the war has brought about a series of new implications and thus caused some new problems in German industry. One of the most urgent questions to be solved is the supply of needed man power in the industry. According to the statistics of the "Reichsamt," there are about 40 million people working in Germany today. The journal (Wirtschaft und Statistik), Economics and Statistics, publishes the following figures:

In agriculture and forestry 5.9 million are working, in industry and transportation about 8 million, and in the household about 1.5 million. The growing influence of the state in economic questions has resulted in the disappearance of smaller businessmen. Simultaneously the number of clerks and civil workers has been increased by 56.8 per cent since the beginning of the Nazi rule.

It goes without saying that no figures concerning the army, air corps and navy are available; however, they are estimated at at least 12 to 15 million. Labor shortage is, therefore, considerable. Although measures have been taken to employ the available man power in the most efficient way, be it by proper distribution of the labor forces, be it by rationalization of the working process, this deficiency has not been entirely overcome. From all occupied countries and from Italy considerable groups of workers were conscripted. The following official statement about foreign workers employed in Germany—excluding war prisoners—was issued in Germany:

Yugoslavia	300,000
Holland	150,000
Belgium	130,000
Italy	300,000
France	85,000
Bulgaria	15,000
Denmark	30,000
Poland	1,000,000
Hungary	67,000
Czecho-Slovakia (protectorate)	180,000
Finland	3,000

The supply from abroad seems, however, to be soon exhausted; this is also indicated by the fact that private employment of alien workers has recently been prohibited. Only official agencies are authorized to do so.

A Berlin correspondent of the Neue Zuericher Zeitung described lately how these alien workers live. He writes: "In the crammed premises of factories, Germans, Hungarians, Croats, Belgians and Poles stand side by side. Among Belgians only those were drafted whose mother tongue is Flemish. They are not called Belgians, but Flemings. Hungarians, Croates and Flemings are considered as members of friendly nations. The Poles, however, take a special position in this grouping.

"Foreigners who will not understand the special tasks they are appointed to and who show obstinate resistance toward the management are ruthlessly dealt with. They are immediately arrested by the 'Werkschutz' (uniformed police supervising every plant). Women share the same fate. Pregnant alien women are taken to the border of their homeland and left there. Children who slip into such transports are sent to school according to their ages and also are used for light work.

"An empty factory building at the outskirts of a huge armament plant which we visited had been transformed into a camp for Polish workers. Men, women and children, wearing a yellow square with a violet "P" in the center, on the left side of the chest, are thus marked as Poles. Fifteen per cent of their wages are taken from them as social taxes.

"Poles are prohibited in restaurants. As entertainment they are shown the German newsreel.

"A SLIM man in the middle forties, a "Sturmbannfueher" of the SS as his uniform indicates, is general manager, and the boss of the armament plant, that employs tens of thousands of German and alien workers. His voice rises above the noises of the machines when he greets anybody or reprimands another. He is accompanied by some more uniformed men, owners, foremen, engineers, and managers of the different divisions of the plant stand to attention while answering his questions. His private airplane is always ready to take him to Brussels, Warsaw, Zagreb, to hire a thousand workers here, another ten thousand there. With the prolongation of the war the wages of German and alien workmen have been lowered 8 to 14 per cent below wages in 1940. The average person works 12 hours a day in Saxonia, Rhineland, Austrian and Czecho-Slovak industrial districts. Since August 11, 1941, overtime payment has been abolished. Workers of the machine industry get only two days off every 3 weeks.

Although the state has profited by reduction of expenses in the armament plants, war expenses are nevertheless increasing. Adding monthly taxes to the growing indebtment shows that war expenditures amount to 10 billion Reichsmark per month. In November 1941 the price policy was further accentuated by generally cutting the "proper margin" from 10 to 20 per cent. In order to boost capacity, enterprises are permitted to charge a one to two per cent premium for excessive outputs. Deductions are enforced upon those who fail to meet standard production figures. The new measures result in price reductions for official orders. While previously prices were set in agreement with representatives of different branches of the industries, fixed prices are now set by the state. They are figured out on a basis of so-called good enterprise whereas formerly the so-called medium enterprise had been taken as a basis.

'Spread' Isn't Necessary for Defense Effort

Women Who Sit At Work Require Special Exercises

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is a new name for hips—the "emergency spread." But defense workers have no priority on it!

Ida Jean Kain

The trouble seems to be the longer hours a woman sits the more quickly her figure plumps out at the sides and takes on that shoe-box look just south of the waistline to the rear, and women are sitting more than ever.

You may have noticed an expansion in your own hipline.

You can keep your stomach flat by sheer will power—by making a determined habit of pulling up and in with the abdominal muscles and by sitting with the small of your back pressed against the back of your chair. And you can hold your waist to slimness by constantly stretching your middle.

Hip Exercises

But there is only one thing you can do about the hip situation and that is to exercise. And it takes a specific kind, too. Kicking and rolling are your best bets.

In kicking, kick backward against resistance. Stand erect and thrust alternate legs backward from the hip joint with knees straight. Make short, staccatic thrusts and maintain an upright position throughout. Repeat 20 counts with one leg, then the same number with the other. Afterwards shake each leg loosely to get rid of the tension.

You get the same effect in lying face downward on the floor and raising the leg high in air, knee straight, from the hip joint. When you kick this way, make the movement more deliberate and concentrate on getting all the work you can out of the big, fleshy hip muscles at the back.

There is one other version of the back kick which you may like. This time lie face downward on a sturdy table or flat-topped desk with thighs pressed against the edge of the table and legs straight down, feet on floor. Raise alternate legs high up in back from hips. Continue for 20 counts with one leg, then the other.

Rolling Exercises

There are a number of rolling exercises that will get at the fat on the back and sides of the hips. One of the best is to sit on the floor and lean back on your hands so that your weight is brought to bear on the fleshy part of the hip measurement, flex the knees and hold feet off floor, and roll from side to side. Go away over on the outer thighs. Or keep that position and hold your legs straight as you roll.

If you want to take this part of your figure down quickly, roll and kick every day. It only takes ten minutes a day to get into trim.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Referring to Girl's Problem of Drunken Mother, Woman Says Help for Situation Can Come Only as Answer to Prayer; Demands Hearing of Her View

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My heart has ached so for Diane, your correspondent of June 6, whose mother has become an alcoholic during the last five years, that I am impelled to re-open the discussion. Perhaps I am a fool rushing in where angels fear to tread; but it seems to me you left them without hope. Diane asked suggestions on how to help her mother overcome the vice. Plainly, she wants to do everything possible to aid her mother's reclamation. Since you gave no suggestions along that line, may I have a hearing?

I would say, first of all, that the mother must be aroused to an awareness of her condition. But suppose she is past self-arousal. What then? In that case, I say to Diane: Believe that she can be reclaimed. Turning to Scriptures, (as you yourself do), to the fountainhead of love, power and wisdom, let us find in Matthew, XVIII:19, 20,—"If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father who is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

Diane might suggest to her father,—or put it in the form of a request,—that they two pray for the redemption of their loved one. As a practical "follow-up" activity, they might read aloud,—during those quiet evenings she and her father spend together at home,—from the book you so frequently recommend, "The Sermon on the Mount," by Emmet Fox. Encourage the mother to participate, by taking her turn at reading aloud. If she protests, proceed casually without her. Healthy indifference to her resistance, just at this point, might open her eyes, and they should seek the help of Alcoholics Anonymous. (I am surprised you didn't suggest it).

Should Diane accept your suggestion that her first duty is to herself, in the situation, and establish a separate residence, as a means of safeguarding her own personality health, that move need not obstruct the prayer agreement between her father and herself. The father at home (who seems, as you say, to be meeting the trial with greater strength) may persuade his wife to join him in inspirational reading, and thus acquaint her with higher sources of strength and new purpose in living. We are reminded in Galatians vi:1, 2: "If one be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness . . . Bear ye one another's burdens." And we are encouraged to storm the gates of heaven, for help in time of need, by Hebrews iv:16: "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."

In the event Diane and her father are not yet spiritually sustained and directed themselves, here is a clarion call to become so. The success of their efforts to help the mother depends upon it. The soul of a weaker creature is in the balance. The situation demands the full exercise of their best effort, quickly applied, before the hour for redemption has passed. Please, Miss Haworth, see that these suggestions reach Diane, by whatever channels are open to you. Thank you.

A. T. E.

Friendly Contribution Contains Misstatement

DEAR A. T. E.: While I am genuinely appreciative of your wish to lend a hand in solving the problem posed by Diane, I must challenge your misstatement that I "gave no suggestions along that line." On the contrary, after stipulating the mother's "will to be cured" as the indispensable condition of recovery, I called Diane's attention to a very practical source of help, namely Dr. Robert V. Seliger, psychiatrist at the Johns Hopkins Medical School and Hospital, who is doing notable work in reclaiming alcoholics.

You express surprise that I did not mention Alcoholics Anonymous. Permit me to explain: This column was the first medium of general circulation to publish information concerning Alcoholics Anonymous. Very soon after the organization came into existence—when the success of its work was only just verified, in a relatively small number of cases—the story of its purpose and achievements was told here, and thereafter repeated, time and again, over a period of several years.

Thus I could hope that by now readers of this column had no need to be insistently reminded of that potential source of help. After all, the educational value of this column would be small if I were lazily content to proffer "stock" replies; to lean perennially on one or two whiskered prescriptions, as applicable to a given type of problem, while failing to indicate that social enlightenment was expanding to embrace new interpretations of cause, and new possibilities of cure, of a familiar kind of human frailty. Well, so much for that.

Now, inasmuch as you suggest Diane's getting in touch with Alcoholics Anonymous, on behalf of her mother, you should have told her (if you know) how to reach the local representatives,—and thereby rounded out your recommendation. Alluding to the group is one thing; directing a patient to it is another. In my acquaintance with the group, the local leaders have changed from time to time, as well as the place of (I believe) fortnightly fellowship meetings. However, I understand the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, telephone ADams 1033, keeps conversant with its progress, from year to year; so Diane might inquire there for further information. But if you know much of the philosophy of this group, you must also know that it scrupulously refrains from evangelist activities. The cure of alcoholism, as they have found it, begins when the distrait soul turns spontaneously to God for relief.

Simple Suit That Does Not Wrinkle Basis of Travel Ensemble; Leave Frail Frou-Frou Clothes at Home

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor

LAST minute vacations with changes in working schedules and rail conditions will not be unusual this summer. Even the catch-as-catch-can vacation should have a planned wardrobe, or the whole vacation is likely to be spoiled. There is nothing more disconcerting than to arrive at the end of a journey with clothes improper for the occasion for the weather, or for wearability without continual pressing.

Unless you have a personal maid, it is no fun having clothes that must be continually looked after. Be sure to pack cotton or rayons that will arrive looking fresh. In most cases, this is possible with the wardrobe you have on hand.

Practical Items

If you have bought wisely in early spring for summer, there are probably two or three outfits that are more practical than others. Include these, even if you have to sacrifice your best dress for something that will look fresh and clean. The best dress is likely to be one that needs to go to the cleaners after one or two wearings, and this is no dress to have on a vacation. Even if you are going to a small town, you'll find dry cleaning is being rationed—not because of lack of cleaning fluid but from lack of tires for frequent deliveries.

The actual wardrobe depends, of course, on the kind of vacation you are taking—whether it is at a dude ranch, a summer resort, or back to the home town before travel rationing sets in. Since travel from points East will of necessity be made by train, a suit is of first necessity. In air-conditioned trains a wool suit is comfortable, especially if you turn patriotic and give your Pullman space over to the service men. Coaches have a way of making one cool around the edges at night.

Seersucker Good

In hot weather a wool suit is usually added baggage by the time you reach your destination. As a second choice a cotton seersucker suit will resist wrinkling and arrives still looking neat. Take a double-duty coat along—one that you can throw over you on the train and reverse for possible rainy weather.

Also include a swimming suit and a three or two-piece play outfit with an overskirt. Even if you do not plan to indulge in sports, it is no fun to be left out. For more active sports, take along slacks, shorts and culottes. They will pass for hiking, bicycling, tennis, golf or fishing. Mixables, such as a tailored jacket that will go with both a suit skirt and slacks, are indispensable because they serve more than one purpose.

Dirndls—one or two—will see you through for virtually any occasion, if you are young and slim. Perky, cotton ones in checks and stripes worn with miniature calots of straw or pique answer the need. One shirtwaist "sheer" of fine rayon or cotton voile can be young looking and pretty enough for dress-up affairs.

With accessories, especially hats, you can let yourself go. Any number of little inexpensive types can be tucked into your hat box holding one good, large brimmed chapeau. Since luggage space is at a premium these days, cut down on the number of shoes. Two good pairs of shoes, one high heel that you pack and one low heel that you wear, along with a pair of casual shoes and tennis shoes or beach shoes (if you need them) will be enough. One good pair of washable doeskin gloves and one pair of fabric gloves will complete the necessities.

How to Make Hair Stay Up

Hair, this season, seems to be either going up or coming off. Cautious beauties, who can't decide how they'd look with it off, are turning it up—the general effect being much the same. Which brings us right into that old problem—how to make hair stay up.

Lucille Ball is wearing one of these elaborate high coiffures in her new R-K-O Radio picture, "The Big Street." Her hair was still up, even at the end of a long day on the set. Asked the secret, she showed a collection of small combs with broad, flat teeth—a gadget guaranteed to hold any hair in place.

Lucille has her hair set in small, tight pin curls, which brush out into deep, firm waves. Such deep waves stay in place, when turned up, better than loose curls. Then Lucille has the small combs set into her coiffure all the way up the back. Thus even the fine hairs stay in place, and all without lacquer.

Women Gain in Banking World

New York.—Miss America is taking Mr. America's place in the Nation's financial institutes and will be among the 100,000 new feminine faces aiding wartime banking, replacing male bank employes in their call to the colors, reports the Travelers' Cheque Survey Bureau of the American Express, tabulated from a general survey of women employes in banks. While banks are becoming the Nation's No. 1 salesmen for war bonds and stamps in the biggest war aid banking job in history, the personnel shortage is giving women their greatest opportunity, states Douglas Malcolm of the Cheque Survey Bureau.

Today there are 65,000 women employed in United States banks, ranging in duties from file clerks to tellers, with estimates from the nine regional zones indicating a total employment of 100,000 within the next 12 months. Banking and its challenge to women of education and capabilities is best illustrated by the coeducational enrollment of the American Institute of Banking, which this year numbers 7000 women in its study courses.

Where banks are confronted with acute Government personnel shortages, women are outnumbering men in many departments of banking. In one bank in Washington, women comprised 55 per cent of the staff.

Are You Familiar With the New Federal Reserve Credit Regulations?

This explanation is made so patrons of Washington stores may understand how their accounts are affected.

IS YOURS A REGULAR 30-DAY ACCOUNT?

Then you probably know that purchases you made in May and before, must be paid by July 10th.

What you are buying in June must be paid by August 10th.

The retailer is not permitted to add to your account if it is delinquent on July 10th. Neither may he add to your budget account or open a new budget account if your 30-day account is delinquent.

If it is not convenient for you to pay the account in full by the required time, talk with your store's credit manager about it.

IS YOURS A BUDGET ACCOUNT?

Then make payments as you agreed to do. The written agreement which you received when purchases were made should be complied with. Pay according to these terms.

New purchases on a budget account require a down payment of ⅓ on everything but pianos, furniture and the like, on which the down payment is 20%. Budget accounts, that is accounts which are paid in regular monthly payments, may not extend longer than 12 months.

YOU MAY USE "LAY-AWAY" OR "WILL CALL" ACCOUNTS

It is permitted to put merchandise in "will call" (in stores having this plan) with less than ⅓ down as long as the purchase is not delivered to the customer. As soon as the total required down payment has been deposited the delivery can be made and the remaining ⅔ paid over a period of months. Furniture and pianos may be released from "will call" when 20% has been paid.

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

Younger Set, Hoping to Meet King Peter, Delves Into His History; Envoy of Iraq to Be Feted; Wennerbergs Leaving; Mrs. Richberg Is Hostess

WHILE SOCIAL Washington as a whole waits for King Peter of Yugoslavia to return from the nearby countryside and start his official Washington calendar, a number of local debutantes have been delving into the history of the youngest monarch ever to set foot in this capital of democracy.

Not that it will do the young ladies much good. Seems that the youthful King, who won't be 19 for several months, is supposed to be engaged to 21-year-old Princess Alexandra of Greece, and there's not much chance that even our prettiest buds will have an opportunity for more than a passing nod, or curtsy, in His Majesty's direction.

But, anyway, speculations have been running rife as to whether any of the younger fry have been invited, or will be, to some of the official functions now being planned for the youthful King. Probably they won't, since every effort is being made to keep His Majesty's visit on a completely official status. I do hope he isn't completely surrounded by Cabinet members, Senators and defense czars while he is here. Even though he may be immune to romance, I would like to see him meet some of the pretty girls around our town . . . just so he won't go back home thinking everybody who matters in Washington is at least 20 years older than he is.

Summerscales to Honor New Envoy . . .

One of the newest envoys in Washington, the Minister of Iraq, Ali Jawdat, who arrived several weeks ago, has spent so much time in New York that few Washingtonians have met him.

That situation will be improved for a small group tomorrow afternoon, however, when the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale entertain at an "after 6 o'clock" party in honor of the Minister and Mme. Jawdat. Also on the list of those to be honored at that event will be the Iraq First Secretary and Mme. Seyfullah Kahndan.

Mr. and Mrs. Summerscale and the Iraq Minister became friends some years ago when Mr. Summerscale held a diplomatic post in Bagdad.

Wennerbergs Leaving July 12 . . .

Off the record, but numerous just the same, are the parties now accenting the calendar for the retiring Swedish Counselor, Folke Wennerberg and Mme. Wennerberg, who will be off the middle of next month by plane for Chile.

"It's no time to talk of parties," said Mr. Wennerberg when I talked to him yesterday. There are some—several, really—but that's all I can say. Anyway, come July 1, he and Mme. Wennerberg and their three daughters will be off to Massachusetts for a brief vacation before they take off July 12 for Chile. He will serve as his country's Charge d'Affaires there. The house on Tracy Place where they have been living for several years has been leased to Mr. and Mrs. Otis Wingo and the Wennerberg bags are already packed and ready to go.

Arriving in this country a month ago was Bo H. Ribbing, who will take Mr. Wennerberg's place here. With his wife and three children the new counselor, who came here from France, where he has been serving in the Swedish Legation, is now in New Hampshire for a few days. He will return July 1.

"Yes, of course, we hate to leave Washington," said Mr. Wennerberg, "but diplomats have to get used to that sort of thing."

He should know, for he has been in his country's service for 25 years. His first post was in London, during the last war, and since then he has been on duty in a number of countries, including Japan, Denmark and Russia. Coming to the United States was somehow in the cards when he started diplomatic service shortly after his graduation from the University of Stockholm, for in Minnehaha Park, Minneapolis, stands the statue of his grandfather, Gunnar Wennerberg, erected years ago by American singers of Swedish stock in honor of the celebrated singer and composer.

In 1936, Folke Wennerberg stood in the shadow of that statue to address a throng of 50,000 persons, assembled to celebrate "Swedes' Day" . . . and since then he has felt very much at home in America. Incidentally, two of his three daughters were born here. One did the highly patriotic thing of timing her arrival on George Washington's Birthday, thereby establishing another tie between the Wennerberg family and the United States.

Three Clarks at One Luncheon . . .

Time was when those of us left around Washington the end of June had a hard time finding anybody we knew. In other words, nobody stayed in town who could possibly get away. This year—for obvious reasons, of course—the picture is decidedly different.

Everybody seems to be staying around.

"I can't think of anywhere I'd rather be," said Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark who, this time last year, had taken off to Wyoming for part of the vacation season. The topic of what-are-your-summer-plans-if-any was part of the table talk at Mrs. Donald Richberg's small, informal and very pleasant luncheon. And from what I could gather everybody present had no thought at the moment of stirring one mile outside the Nation's Capital anytime soon.

"I wouldn't leave for anything," said Mrs. D. Worth Clark, who added that her gas-rationing card wouldn't permit her to go very far anyway. Mrs. Rex Clark (yes, there were three Clarks at this get-together) of Los Angeles obesrved that Washington seemed such an interesting place she could easily see why nobody would want to leave. "But I have been surprised," she went on, "to find out that people here seem far less concerned about the war than the people back home."

One or two others present took mild issue with the visiting Mrs. Clark and pointed out that if people anywhere talked, or thought, more about the war than Washingtonians . . . well, it simply wasn't possible . . . Among other guests were Mrs. William L. Batt, who probably hears nothing but war talk around her household these days; Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin.

Mrs. D. Worth Clark, incidentally, said she had to tear away from the party early in order to make final plans for a small dinner last evening at which she and her husband were to celebrate their sixteenth wedding anniversary. Their 15-year-old daughter, Nancy, has a new job. She's going to be a general all-summer helper at a farm near Petersburg, Va., and is thrilled over the prospect.

And that reminds me—young Champ Clark, eldest son of Senator and Mrs. Bennett Clark, started his newspaper career last night. He's just back in town after finishing his sophomore year at the University of Missouri.

He will spend three days in Rio meeting officials, two days in Sao Paulo and a week in Sabara, the capital of Minas Geraes.

Allen Raymond Honored at Party By Mr., Mrs. Andrews

Traveling should be the middle name of Allen Raymond who yesterday gave a brief—and humorous—sketch of the life of a foreign correspondent at the party given in his honor by Mr. and Mrs. Bert Andrews at the Mayflower.

It's not all so glamorous as it may sound, what with mosquitos in Australia (that travel in formation); boats fitted to carry 200 with a refugee list of 2000, and indiscriminate bombings, whether London or Java.

It was a most informal party, mostly members of the Fourth Estate. Mrs. Andrews received wearing a kelly green suit and a cluster of orchids. Not far away was Mrs. Raymond, also in orchids, who has learned that the wife of a newspaperman can expect most anything to happen—and it usually does.

The Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy, Comdr. W. S. Jameson, and Mrs. Jameson chatted with Maj. Ralph Forester, also a Britisher; Mrs. J. M. Minifie, chic in black, discussed career women with Paul Reading of the Canadian Embassy. Miss Christine Anderson was busy introducing Miss Joan Becker of New York. Mrs. Al Warner, smart in green and white, reports that her broadcasting husband will soon be a major in the Army.

Others there were Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wright, Dr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Silver and the latter's sister, Miss Kay Phelps, down from New York; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle Bargeron, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Buell, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wooten, Bascom Timmons, and many more.

Mrs. W. F. Bullis Gives Luncheon

Mrs. William F. Bullis entertained with a luncheon yesterday at Mrs. Kay's Toll House in Silver Spring in honor of Mrs. Eben Peek, wife of the new headmaster at Bullis School who has recently come here from Harrisburg Academy in Pennsylvania. Covers were laid for 13 guests.

Mrs. Bullis will leave on Thursday, accompanied by her four children, Clark, Larry, Starr and Faith, to join Lieutenant Commander Bullis at the University of Notre Dame for the duration.

The bridesmaids, Miss Victoria Kissal, Miss Mary Lothrop, Miss Marjorie Moffett, Miss Constance Smith, Miss Margaret Woods and Miss Helen Miller wore identical frocks in pale yellow and all the attendants wore matching shoulder length veils with headdresses to match their bouquets of summer blossoms.

Lieut. William Clark Leedy was his brother's best man. Ushering were Ensigns Taswell Shepard, William Raccette, Richard Zimmerman, Bartholomew Connelly, James Cochran and Harry Arnest.

A reception followed in the garden of the Ballou home where the bride's mother received guests wearing an Alice blue chiffon gown and matching hat. Mrs. Jay Clark Leedy was attired in a navy blue crepe and both wore corsages of yellow roses.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg the couple will go to San Francisco where they will be for the time being. The bride attended American University and Lieutenant Leedy graduated from Oregon State where he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta.

D. C. Chapter of Women Fliers of America Learns Map Reading, How to Use Rifle

THEY CAN FLY. Soon they'll be able to shoot their way out of enemy traps. And if intensive study turns the trick, they'll be expert in world geography. In short—these are the enthusiastic members of the District of Columbia chapter of Women Fliers of America.

Eager to get a fling at defense work, members of the club are attending classes in map reading and rifle marksmanship. Also, they are perfecting advanced first aid and starting elementary courses for beginners.

The prone position seems to be the favorite on the rifle range. Each

MRS. CYNTHIA DAVIS MARTIN — MISS GAIL CONROY — MRS. GEORGE WRIGHT

Wednesday the rifle marksmanship class is held at the National Rifle Association's range, Tenth and G Streets Northeast. However, Lieut. James Green who teaches the class has declared a two-week holiday, according to Miss Elizabeth Kelly, education chairman. Map reading classes are held each Tuesday at Central High School.

At a recent meeting of the Washington chapter arrangements were completed for the opening of a new ground school Thursday under the direction of Lewis Prout. Members of the group may fly at Schrom Airport in Greenbelt, Md.

Miss Thelma Myers, chairman of the Washington chapter, reports that free flying time will be given the member who brings in the most new recruits into the organization.

No matter how high the temperature soars in July and August, the group expects to stick to the program.

Although the Washington chapter numbers only 20 members, the members are keenly interested in aviation, and what they lack in quantity they make up in versatility and keenness. Take Mrs. George Wright (Anne Kinnie) for example. In addition to holding down a day job on Capitol Hill, Anne studied flying two or three nights a week. The other nights she was busy poring over Spanish, but first in her thoughts were the flying classes.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is honorary chairman of the national organization, and Mrs. Cynthia Davis Martin is a national director of the Women Fliers of America, Inc.

Miss Gail Conroy, local entertainment chairman, is planning many gay events for the group.

Poetry Session

BECAUSE the late Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith chose Emily Dickinson as her chief literary enthusiast, members of the poetry group of the Washington branch, American Association of University Women, will read one of Miss Dickinson's writings at a meeting tonight at the Readers Book Shop. But for the most part the evening will be given over to Dr. Smith's own poetry, particularly her own favorite "Andrews Raid," a ballad based on a Civil War incident. The time is 8 o'clock and the occasion is the dedication of a memorial program to Dr. Smith, who often read poetry with the group.

The service will be a simple one in the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Louis Nevick, at 8 o'clock. It was at first scheduled to be held in the vestry rooms of the Adas Israel Synagogue. Lieutenant Friedman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Friedman.

Dr. Darlington Very Attentive, Maid Testifies

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., June 22.—The Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington was described in court today by a former maid in the home of the late Mrs. Anna H. Paton as "much more attentive to Mrs. Paton than any husband ever was to a wife."

Muriel Harper, a servant in the Paton household for six years, said also in a statement introduced in evidence that the 78-year-old widow was "overly fond of him."

Miss Harper was the first witness for three relatives of Mrs. Paton who seek to break the will which gave Dr. Darlington 30 per cent of her $1,300,000 estate and 10 per cent to his Church of the Heavenly Rest on Fifth Avenue, New York City. He is charged with undue influence.

Under cross-examination by Theodore Kiendl, counsel for the proponents of the will, Miss Harper said there was nothing immoral, so far as she knew, in the relationship between Mrs. Paton and Dr. Darlington.

Miss Harper also testified the widow sought to keep her meetings with Dr. Darlington secret from the rector's wife.

On one occasion her employer instructed her to move the table back from a window overlooking Fifth Avenue, she said.

"I asked her why," Miss Harper said, "and she told me that Mrs. Darlington had been riding down Fifth Avenue on top of a double-decker bus and had looked in the window to see the two of them having lunch together. She said Mrs. Darlington was annoyed."

Previously, a "score card" showing that Dr. Darlington communicated by letter, cable, postcard and telephone with Mrs. Paton 31 times during a trip abroad in 1939 was introduced in evidence.

Counsel conceded that the score sheet was in her handwriting.

Joseph A. Nickerson, counsel for the contestants, read from letters and telegrams sent by Dr. Darlington to Mrs. Paton containing such phrases as "love and then more love," "I miss you very much . . . I will count the days until I return," "next to Rotterdam I love you and your letters," "I am overjoyed to think that within a short time I'll be with you. You see I love you very much. Lots of love, affectionately, Harry."

An appraisal introduced by proponents of the will showed that the estate had been reduced by taxes to $800,000.

New Union Claims 18,750 Secessionists

The newly organized National Council of Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers yesterday claimed a membership of 18,750 secessionists from District 50 of John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers of America.

Led by Martin Wagner, who walked out of the Lewis camp when Lewis fired Philip Murray as vice president of the miners last month, the council will hold its first convention in August, and is expected to seek direct affiliation with the C. I. O.

Wagner predicted nearly all of the 40,000 gas, coke and chemical workers orginally organized in District 50 would join the council by convention time.

A spokesman for District 50 later termed all Wagner's statements "ridiculous." The spokesman said the council did not have more than 2000 members.

The secession movement, Wagner said, has extended thus far to 49 local unions located in Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, Minnesota, New York, New Jersey, Missouri, Connecticut and Massachusetts. He said the vote approving the change in affiliation was unanimous in most cases.

Wagner said "we expect a fight" from Lewis and the council was preparing for it. One St. Louis local, he said, pledged itself to raise a special fund of $10,000 to finance any court fight Lewis may start over the transfer of contracts from District 50 to the council.

Va. Merchant, 60, Slays Wife, Self

Petersburg, Va., June 22 (AP).—Andrew Meade Jones, 60, Brunswick County merchant, shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Annie Harrison Jones, 53, in their home in Rawlings early yesterday and then killed himself with the shotgun.

Dr. F. N. Mallory, county coroner, returned a verdict of homicide and suicide and deemed an inquest unnecessary. Mr. Jones had been in bad health for sometime, friends said.

AIR-CONDITIONED
For 54 Years Berlitz Has Never Failed

a 75-ton kick in the panzers!

Confidence is the strong and good cousin of that horrid word complacency. Most Americans are confident, few are complacent today. Confidence is our heritage, bequeathed to us by the pioneers, and nurtured by headlines of industrial marvels.

From the day when the Flatiron Building made news, to the colossal statistics of Grand Coulee, we have become firmly convinced that no task is too great for our vast construction industry.

That conviction is justified. A year before Pearl Harbor Sunday was anything more than a gleam in treacherous oriental eyes, our engineers and contractors were moving earth faster than it had ever been moved before . . . in preparation for projects which since have made our skyscrapers and giant bridges look like mere trial heats.

You know part of the story. We can't tell it all . . . complete aluminum plants built between Christmases . . . whole farms transfigured into bomber plants in less time than elapses between crops of corn . . . great shipyards in operation today on inlets that were frog ponds when the "Battle of Britain" was at its height.

How were these miracles of construction performed?

We can't call it genius. Germany, in particular, has many great engineering minds, yet the entire Axis is outstripped by our capacity to do big jobs fast.

We can't explain it by just calling it skill and experience. The new shipyards prove that . . . our skilled and experienced shipbuilders were absorbed by navy construction long ago. Yet we have met each new quota of cargo shipbuilding. Deep in our hearts, we all know industry will meet whatever quota may be needed, however impossible that may seem now.

▶ Some of these cargo ships and shipyards are being built by landlubbers . . . by men who knew nothing of the sea, but who were hell on reading blueprints and at designing and operating complicated machines.

There are several reasons why ordinary Americans become Supermen when faced by "fantastic" construction jobs.

▶ The first reason is the intrepid spirit of the management and men of American construction. With a slide rule in his hand, the most meek and stoop-shouldered of American engineers becomes a high adventurer. He is willing to gamble that the machines and men at his command can lick anything this side of the fourth dimension.

The second reason is motive power. The leaders of our construction industry have always had the guts to gamble the cost of big machines to do big jobs. Probably the rest of the world combined cannot match our array of power shovels, scrapers, bulldozers, compressors, welders, motors and engines for moving and moulding earth, water, steel and stone.

The third reason is men. A shovel weighing 75 tons needs a "75-ton mind" at the control levers . . . American labor takes to machinery as a co-ed takes to "swing."

The fourth reason is versatility. The construction industry is used to turning corners at high speed . . . to an organization that has built railroads, cathedrals, bridges, and movie palaces, making a munitions plant in a hurry just means more men, more machines and more night work, and more of that good American ingenuity.

The fifth reason is "mobilized information."

▶ Through a distinctively American process, the Industrial Press, trial and error are reduced to a minimum. Information on successful new techniques flows freely from job to job.

If a factory in Kansas succeeds in laying the dust and stopping ruts in its parking lot, an engineer with the job of quick-surfacing a jungle airport reads how it was done in a construction magazine.

If a shipbuilder finds he can cut construction time in half by building hulls upside down, other shipbuilders learn about it from their technical magazines.

At McGraw-Hill alone, 153 editors and 725 field correspondents are constantly combing construction as well as industrial jobs to find new and faster methods. This "know-how" is then routed through industrial magazines to every industry where it can be helpful.

In addition to the editors, many industrial advertisers keep men in the construction field to watch the performance of their machines. Their reports are used in industrial advertising to show operators how to make machines do more work and last longer in these days of shortages of time and metals.

. . . Now this advertisement contains a moral and "commercial." The commercial objective is obvious. The moral is this:

▶ Let's remember how well government, management and labor are getting along together in the face of visible peril. When the war is all over, we need have no fear of the invisible perils of peace, if we tackle our jobs in the same cooperative spirit.

In recognition of the miracle of war production—accomplished through the cooperation of American management and labor with the W. P. B. . . . this advertisement is published by the McGraw-Hill Network of Industrial Communication.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kutz

welfare, and the Council of Personnel Administration, an organization of personnel directors in the Federal service. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, it was learned, has requested copies of the plan. She'll make her own study of employe health conditions. The plan was reportedly drafted in the Public Health Service by Dr. Beatrice B. Berle, the wife of Assistant State Secretary Adolf A. Berle, who is a PHS consultant, and Dr. Oswald F. Hedley, a surgeon in PHS's industrial hygiene division.

A survey revealed that last year more than two million man days were lost by sickness of Federal employes here. The employes averaged 7.4 days of sick leave which is surprisingly small. They're entitled to 15 days. Women averaged 8.5 days and the men only 5.8 days. Employes between 20 and 60 took off 50 per cent more time than the employes below 50. The group above 60 took four times as much sick leave as their colleagues below 50. The health plan could be put into operation at an average cost of $5 per year per employe, or about $1,250,000 annually. The President and the Budget Bureau are expected to recommend the appropriation to Congress.

Service Doctors Available

Despite the shortage of doctors and nurses, Dr. Parran is said to believe that a sufficient number could be detailed to the agencies by his organization. War and Navy Departments have approximately 90,000 employes here and could detail commissioned officers to the clinics if that became necessary. Both departments are anxious to participate but they would prefer to have PHS doctors. The PHS report points out that additional hospital beds should be provided here but it makes no suggestions on how it can be done. Group Health Association, a cooperative of Federal workers, was the first attempt to provide preventive medicine here. It met with terrific opposition but now it's generally accepted.

More Trouble For Ickes

Interior Secretary Harold Ickes has his troubles. Now it's the Public Building Administration. The secretary ordered his department stripped of rubber in cooperation with the President's rubber salvage campaign. Rubber keys have been taken from typewriters at Interior. Seat cushions and cigaret holders made of rubber have been hauled to the department stockpile, which now has more than three tons of scrap rubber. Yesterday morning it was raining and expensive Indian-designed rubber floor mats were laid out in the corridors. The mats were made especially for the department. Ickes spied the rubber mats, along with rubber cuspidor mats, and he ordered them tossed onto the stockpile. PBA owns the mats. Its officials heard of the Ickes order and they grabbed the mats and locked them up. Late yesterday Ickes was demanding that they give them up. PBA still had 'em under lock and key.

A July 4 Holiday?

Many top Federal officials are in favor of a holiday on July 4. It's now believed that only those offices will be kept open that are absolutely essential to the war effort. Employes haven't had a holiday since Pearl Harbor . . . Civil service exams: Assistant statistical clerk, $1620; ground school supervisor, $3200 to $3500; flight supervisor, $3500 to $3800, and junior medical officer for employment at St. Elizabeths, $2000.

Faster Than He Thought

An Oklahoma City hardware store manager's curiosity almost landed him in jail. He wanted to find out how long it would take the police to respond to his burglar alarm, so he rang it. Before he could explain, police had him collared and rushed him to the police station, thinking he was a burglar.

A Hot Tip

Firemen at Massillon, Ohio, responded to a fire alarm, which was sent by telegram, 200 miles away. P. W. Homrighous and his wife went to Fort Wayne, Ind., then remembered they had left an electric iron attached. They sent a wire to the Massillon fire company, which arrived on the scene to find the ironing board in flames.

Suburban Rent Ceiling Due July 1

Maryland, Virginia Failing to Act, OPA Will Apply Jan. 1, 1941, Level

The Office of Price Administration is scheduled to order rents in Washington's Maryland and Virginia suburbs reduced to the level of January 1, 1941, OPA announced yesterday.

The order is due to come early next week and to be effective July 1 under extension of Federal rent control on that day to 60 cities and war rental areas with a total population of 28 millions.

Maximum rent regulations are slated to be invoked in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties in Maryland and Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties in Virginia. Rent control also is in store for Baltimore.

In homes and apartments which were rented on January 1, 1941, issuance of the control order would automatically "roll back" rents to their level of that date. Comparable rents would be established for dwellings constructed or otherwise put on the rental market since January 1, 1941.

OPA's announcement said "present indications are" that rent control will be extended to the 60 new areas, but there was little likelihood that plans for establishing Federal rent-regulation machinery in those areas will be abandoned.

OPA contemplates creation of separate rent-control areas in suburban Maryland and Virginia with a director to be appointed and an office to be set up in each area. The first step in the direction of control was taken April 28 by designation of the suburbs as a single war-rental area.

Under the Price-Control Act, local authorities having jurisdiction over such areas were to be given 60 days to reduce rents to the level of January, 1941, and to set up machinery for restriction of evictions and for establishment of rents for dwellings not rented prior to the rent-ceiling date.

States Fail to Act

OPM's contemplated action would follow failure of Maryland and Virginia authorities to take this action. The 60-day period expires Sunday.

OPA has under way a vast program for rent control in war production areas, of which the pending action is a second phase. Control machinery already has been set up in 20 areas with a population of nine million.

Control is expected to be extended to Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Newark and Jersey City and northeast New Jersey generally, Atlanta, San Antonio, Indianapolis, Joliet and Rockford, Ill., and Dayton, Ohio.

Youth Indicted For Violation Of Draft Act

The District Grand Jury yesterday indicted Lawrence M. Thurston, 23-year-old former clerk in the Department of Justice, on four counts—wearing a naval officer's uniform without authority, illegally removing records from a Government office, unlawful possession of Government badges and violation of the Selective Service Act.

Thurston, who lives at 4419 Illinois Avenue Northwest, was said to have failed to appear for Army induction.

A total of 70 indictments were returned. The others were:

Bus-Auto Crash in Underpass, Midtown Blaze Keep D.C. Police and Firemen Busy

HEAD-ON CRASH—Policeman examines the wreckage of an auto and bus which collided head-on last night in the Sixteenth Street underpass at Scott Circle. The commercial attache of the Egyptian Legation, who was driving the auto, was injured. Six bus passengers were also hurt

Egyptian Attache's Car Collides With Capital Transit Stage

A head-on bus-automobile crash in the Sixteenth Street underpass at Scott Circle, injuring a diplomat and six bus passengers, and a two-alarm fire at 1322 New York Avenue Northwest, in which one fireman was overcome, caused high excitement in midtown last night.

Firefighting apparatus, police cars and ambulances screamed through the streets for more than an hour, traffic was congested and thousands of spectators congregated almost simultaneously at both scenes.

Mohamed A. Sirag-el-Din, 38, commercial attache of the Egyptian Legation, was hurt, possibly seriously, when his automobile hurdled the concrete dividing strip beneath Scott Circle and crashed head-on with a southbound Capital Transit bus. None of the 8 or 10 bus passengers was seriously injured.

At 8:59 p. m., hardly half an hour after the traffic accident, firemen were called to the New York Avenue address to subdue a stubborn basement blaze which sent billows of dense smoke through the building's five floors, occupied by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Fireman James E. White, 36, of 9705 Lawson Place, Silver Spring, Md., member of No. 3 Truck Company, was overcome when he descended into the basement in an attempt to get at the blaze. Rescued by Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman, who is an auxiliary fireman, he was given first aid at Emergency Hospital.

The fire, finally quenched by tearing open the floor and playing a revolving spray into the basement, did little damage. Firemen said refuse, janitors' supplies and some coal were afire and that the extreme heat charred several bound packages, which appeared to be records, in fireproof files.

Army Officer Hurt

Of the bus passengers hurt, only Col. Bruce Roberts of the Army Medical Center required more than first aid. Bruised, he was taken to Emergency Hospital and later transferred to Walter Reed Hospital.

Others slightly injured identified themselves as Hilda Birschall, 28, of 337 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest; Dorothy Pachese, 18, of 1400 Sixteenth Street Northwest; Woodrow W. Jenkins, 23, of 510 Ninth Street Northwest; George J. Jordan, 17, of 7819 Eastern Avenue, and Joseph Barnett, 45, of 1390 Nicholson Street Northwest.

Sirag-el-Din, alone in the Egyptian Legation automobile, was taken to Emergency Hospital with a possible skull fracture and lacerations and abrasions. He was still unconscious at a late hour.

Accident Investigation Unit Policemen Louis Sims and P. G. Mangum reported the diplomat apparently first lost control of the car on the downhill rain-drenched south approach to the underpass when the left wheels touched the raised strip dividing northbound and southbound traffic.

Struck Two Buses

The automobile veered to the right, caromed off of a northbound bus and plunged across the dividing strip, striking the southbound bus and the west wall of the underpass at the same time.

The automobile's motor was ripped almost completely from its frame and afterward lay alongside a front wheel. The front of the chassis wedged itself beneath the front of the bus.

Shellie E. Turner, 40, of 4615 Fourteenth Street Northwest, driver of the bus, was not hurt except for a slight cut on the hand, apparently from flying glass.

Burglars Get Cash, Rings, Guns, Dresses

A branch postoffice and three filling stations were among victims in a series of weekend housebreakings reported to police after the places reopened for business yesterday.

The loot included $57 cash, two wedding rings, two revolvers and a number of women's dresses. Wall-safes in two of the establishments entered, gas stations located at 140 Florida Avenue Northeast and 710 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, apparently withstood efforts of the thieves to force them open.

From the latter station, operated by the United Petroleum Co., a .32-caliber police revolver and a .25-caliber automatic pistol were taken, but the other station, operated by Lee Saylor, yielded nothing. A third gas station, at 415 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, likewise proved a fruitless entry, according to Harry Payne, the owner.

The postoffice branch, located at 416 Seventh Street Southwest, was forced by entering the loft through a trap door and cutting a hole through the ceiling. John W. Schivier, manager, told detectives the place was ransaked but that he could find nothing missing.

Thieves who entered a barbershop at 6319 Dix Street Northeast by breaking a rear door glass took $30 from the cash register and $27 from a drawer, the owner, Emilio G. Mattera, told police. Mrs. Cleo Williams, 120 C Street Northeast, reported the theft of two wedding rings and an assortment of jewelry by a prowler who entered the apartment apparently with a duplicate key. Louis Winer, manager of a cleaning shop at 3220 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, reported that 38 dresses were stolen from his place some time during the weekend.

Guild Convention Told Lewis Snipes At War Effort

Denver, June 22 (AP).—The American Newspaper Guild in convention heard John L. Lewis, former C. I. O. president, accused today of "trying to defeat the war effort and place himself in a strong position in this Nation even over the carcasses of those in the labor movement."

The accusation came from Reid Robinson, Denver, a C. I. O. vice president and head of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. He charged that Lewis, "in fighting against the C. I. O. and the President of the United States is as good a friend of Hitler as Martin Dies and some of those other reactionaries."

Milton Murray, Detroit, guild president, asserted that while forfeiture of any of labor's rights should not be countenanced, the guild should bear an increasingly heavier war burden "because defeat would mean an intolerable bondage for mankind."

D. C. Druggist Injured When Hit by Streetcar

F. B. Tipton, 67, Washington druggist, suffered a possible leg fracture when he was struck by a streetcar late last night on Fourteenth Street near Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where his condition was said to be good.

Tipton is president and treasurer of the Tipton & Myers Drug Store at 1400 Fourteenth Street Northwest. He lives at 1324 Farragut Street Northwest.

Cabbies Lose Appeal for Rate Hearing

Threat of Strike Revived as Court Dismisses Drivers' Plea for Restudy

Threat of a general cab strike was revived last night following the dismissal in District Court of the appeal by the United Taxicab Drivers, Inc., for a public hearing on the new rates ordered by the Public Utilities Commission.

The case will be taken to the Court of Appeals immediately, Andrew N. Richardson, president of the union, said last night. If the union loses this appeal, then the strike looms as a definite possibility, Richardson indicated.

"We'll use all legal recourses first," Richardson said. "If those fail—well, we will not work under the new system."

Meanwhile, the dismissal of the union's suit automatically disposed of the stay of the P. U. C. order for a new 21 subzone rate system, and put the new rates immediately into effect. For the past week the town has had two cab-rate systems in operation.

Divergent Opinion

Six companies had followed the advice of P. U. C. Chairman Gregory Hankin who said the union appeal, filed June 12, did not stay the P. U. C. order, which was to have gone into effect June 15. Other drivers had accepted the opinion of the remainder of the P. U. C. and the corporation counsel and retained the old rates pending the court decision.

The two rates were still operating last night, but taxi officials said the men would change over as soon as they could be informed of the court dismissal. By this morning all drivers were expected to be charging under the new system.

The basic rates are still 30-40-60 and 60 cents to go from the downtown zone one into the second, third or fourth zones. The boundaries have been changed slightly, but the innovation is the division of all but the first zone into a series of subzones which set up on entirely new rate scale within the boundaries of the main zones.

The new maps and complicated chart showing the subzone charges (such as from zone 2-A to 3-H) are to be displayed in the cabs today for the driver and passenger to try to figure out.

Others to Fight

Justice Matthew F. McGuire dismissed the union's suit for a public hearing on the P. U. C. order on the grounds given by Assistant Corporation Counsel Lloyd Harrison in the P. U. C.'s counterappeal that the suit be dismissed.

McGuire ruled that the three individuals who signed the petition were not in good standing before the court because they had not first asked the P. U. C. for a rehearing, and that the union, as a corporation, had not established that the order was "arbitrary and unreasonable."

James Shenos, counsel for the union, said that besides the appeal to the higher court, he thought the case could still be fought by individuals complying with the procedure of asking for a P. U. C. rehearing.

Sniper Suspect

Second Trial Of Eklund Under Way

John Eugene Eklund—convicted more than a year ago as the mysterious "sniper slayer" who terrorized Washington's Negro population in the autumn of 1940—went on trial again in District Court yesterday.

The 27-year-old former college student won a new trial March 24 on the basis of perjured testimony by Herbert Ray, a star prosecution witness, during the first murder trial. Ray, who swore he had no criminal record, had served a term in Leavenworth Penitentiary for forgery and housebreaking under another name.

Yesterday's session ended with the jury still not chosen.

Six Jurors Excused

At 6:20 last night Defense Attorneys Harry Whelan and Alfred F. Graham and Assistant United States Attorneys John W. Fihelly and Charles B. Murray agreed on the selection of jurors. However, when Justice James W. Morris announced that the seriousness of the case would resuire locking the 12 men and women in a hotel room for the duration of the trial, six jurors asked for dismissal because of personal commitments.

Replacement of jurors excused by Justice Morris was scheduled for this morning.

Eklund was arrested in November, 1940, after a series of murders—all by a man who shot his victims from behind at close range—had baffled police for more than a month.

The sniper's fourth and last victim was Hyland McClaine, a 17-year-old Negro, who was shot in the back of the head while walking with his girl friend October 15 on Rock Creek Parkway near Virginia Avenue Northwest. The girl, Mildred Washington of 2323 Virginia Avenue Northwest later identified Eklund as the assailant.

Bullets Matched

Three other Negro murders, which were not included in Eklund's conviction June 7, 1941, were spread over several weeks and accompanied by circumstances suggesting a mystery novel. On one occasion police received a call from one of their telephone boxes at Fifteenth and M Streets Northwest, and a voice said:

"I am the sniper. I'm just warning you."

During Eklund's first trial two experts testified that the pistol that killed McClaine also killed two of the sniper's other victims—Theodore Gofney of 832½ Twenty-sixth Street Northwest and Samuel Banks, 2600 I Street Northwest, who were killed together as they sat on a bench outside Banks' home October 15, 1940. Also shot from behind was Moe Steele, 12 P Street Northeast, but the bullets could not be found for comparison with those retrieved in the other shootings. All the victims were Negroes.

Hearing Set On Rooming House Curbs

An amendment to the zoning regulations which would permit rooming and boarding houses to operate in residential areas will be given a public hearing at the District Building Board Room at 10 a. m. July 23.

This relaxing of the barriers is designed as a war measure and is to be effective for not more than one year after the cessation of hostilities. The revision would permit persons in such areas to take in more than four roomers, but would still prohibit them from taking in more than ten, since it rules that no fire escapes may be constructed in the conversion of residences into rooming houses.

Under the present fire regulations, fire escapes are required for houses lodging more than 10 guests.

Besides protecting the other property owners in the restricted zones by the time limitation, the proposed order rules that in order to operate a rooming house, the operator must satisfy the Board of Zoning Adjustment that "the temporary use proposed will not have a tendency to blight permanently the restricted character of the neighborhood.

D. C. Budget Gets Final Approval

$56,313,851 Bill, Passed by Senate, Is Now Ready For White House

Congress completed action yesterday on the District's 1943 supply bill and the $56,313,851 measure was sent to the White House.

Final approval of the budget for operation of the municipal Government in the fiscal year beginning July 1 was given by the Senate after the House earlier in the day refused to act favorably on a rider sponsored by Chairman Pat McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, of the Senate District Committee.

The Senate then agreed to eliminate the rider and voted approval of the conference report.

The rider would have required Federal departments to pay the salaries of their employes assigned to special work or investigations on Capitol Hill.

Sen. Austin Blocks Confirmation of Meaney to Bench

By the Associated Press

The Senate Judiciary Committee considered yesterday the nomination of Thomas F. Meaney as a judge of the New Jersey District Court, but decided to defer action until a special meeting to be held next Wednesday afternoon.

The committee received from a subcommittee headed by Senator Smathers (Democrat) of New Jersey a recommendation that Meaney be confirmed. Smathers and Senator Hughes (Democrat) of Delaware favored confirmation, but the third subcommittee member, Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont in a telegram from Burlington, Vt., asked to be reported as opposed to confirmation.

Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana of the full committee said action was deferred until Wednesday chiefly in order that the group might receive from Austin a verbal report on why he opposed confirmation. Van Nuys said Austin's office had reported to the committee that he wished to be heard.

Service Men to Demonstrate Swimming in Blazing Oil

Soldiers, sailors, marines and Coast Guardsmen will demonstrate swimming "under hazardous conditions," with full equipment, at the annual Red Cross water exhibitions tomorrow night in East Potomac Park Pool, it was announced yesterday.

Stroking through burning oil and other such tasks will be simulated. JohnW. Gates, new director of First Aid and Water Safety of the District Red Cross Chapter, will be in charge.

Gates said a full summer program of water safety instruction had been arranged, aimed particularly at filling the ranks of qualified instructors, depleted by approximately a third by men entering the armed forces.

Registrant Returns To Canada for Service

Howard L. Perry, 25, of 1941 Biltmore Street Northwest, yesterday became the first Canadian living in the United States and subject to United States Selective Service laws to be released by this country to Canadian induction officials.

Perry could have had draft exemption because of his dependent mother in Vancouver but waived the right. He is due in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, to begin training for the R. C. A. F. Perry came to Washington from Canada October 1, 1941, and since that time has been employed by the British Air Commission.

His return was taken under a courtesy agreement between the United States and Canada whereby residents of either nation who are called for military duty may return to their native countries to perform such service.

Blackout Speed Violation Brings Fine

Charged with driving more than 15 miles an hour during last week's dusk-to-dawn blackout, Edmund R. LaFond, of Bethesda, Md., athletic director of Catholic University, was fined $10 in Police Court yesterday.

Policeman L. H. Peterson, of the Traffic Division, who stopped LaFond at Wisconsin Avenue and Porter Street Northwest, told Judge John P. McMahon he had estimated LaFond's speed at 35 miles an hour.

LaFond was charged with violation of a recent order by the District Commission setting a special speed limit during blackouts. The case, therefore, was heard in the District of Columbia branch of Police Court instead of Traffic Court.

Pepco Workers Take Nutrition Courses

Employes of the Potomac Electric Power Co. are combining eating with learning as they complete Red Cross nutrition courses during their one hour lunch period, Mrs. Theodore Leary, chairman of nutrition of the District Red Cross, announced today.

Two groups are taking the course four days a week. The first one meets at noon, eats lunch until 12:15, which includes iced tea served by the company, and has the class until 1 p. m. The second group meets at 1 p. m. and repeats the schedule until 2 p. m.

The groups are made up of both married and unmarried women. They are learning weight control diets, how to have more pep, how to eat and stay thin, how to cut their food bills, and how to cook. They were shown a movie on the care of foods in the refrigerator, and were given a demonstration on cuts of meat by an employe from a meat concern.

Employes Raise Fund For Red Cross Car

Fowler Appointed Special Defense Aide

"For special meritorious service in connection with Civilian Defense," District Budget Officer Walter Fowler was appointed last night special assistant to Defense Coordinator John Russell Young. Fowler, who has had most of the financial headaches of the local defense office thrust upon him in the nine months it has been actively organized, will be the director of finance.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, June 22.—This is where Whirlaway and Alsab have a date on August 1, unless either or both of them are indisposed that afternoon. Arlington Park is already calling it the race of the year—the $25,000 Arlington Handicap which happily admits both 3 and 4-year-olds and makes an Alsab-Whirlaway contest possible.

POVICH

Whirlaway is now keeping stake engagements in the East but Alsab is back here in his home town, where last year he first caught the attention of the turf with his domination of Chicago's 2-year-old stakes. There is nothing on Whirlaway's calendar, however, that will keep him out of the $25,000 Arlington on August 1, and it will be a mile and a quarter test that will search out the speed and stamina of the two top horses now in training.

Because he is a 3-year-old, Alsab will get a weight concession from Whirlaway, probably as much as 12-pounds. The race may draw Market Wise and Shut Out too, but the race the horse people want to see is Whirlaway vs. Alsab. What happens in the last quarter mile when the long-tailed Whirlaway and the trim little Alsab turn on their famed stretch rush certainly figures to be the story of the race.

Sarge Swenke, the old ball player who turned horse trainer after the last World War, already has Alsab on the ground. The little fellow is in his Arlington stall, his legs heavily bandaged. Swenke fired him after Alsab suffered a splint in his last Eastern race, but there are no fears that he will not be ready for Whirlaway.

Come July 4, the fashionable Arlington track will make its contribution to the war effort, and it will be a beaut. On that day, the Stars and Stripes Handicap will be run, and the track will turn over to Army-Navy relief an all-profits bundle that will go as high as $100,00.

Arlington is giving up to the relief fund all of the admission fees, and all of the 8 per cent of the mutuel and handle that is not required to pay the day's purses. Track officials will get no pay for the day, and in their case it is gratitude for the fact that Arlington is being permitted to operate in war times. The track was threatened with the loss of its train service from Chicago, which would have been a body blow, but last minute arrangements kept the trains running.

No inconsiderable portion of the Army-Navy Relief Fund's gains from the day's racing on July 4 will be the odd pennies that winning betters never receive from the mutuel department, which pays off to the dime. Arlington will handle a million dollars worth of bets on that day, and the odd pennies will amount to, conservatively, $10,000. Last year, this breakage from pennies amounted to 1¼ per cent of all money bet.

The sooner the Federal Government puts into effect its new 5 per cent tax on mutuel bets, the sooner big money will start to roll in. A million-dollar betting day will net the Treasury $5000, and on an ordinary day's racing during the summer season, the Treasury stands to profit approximately $15,000 from all tracks.

The track operators don't quite know what to do about the added 5 per cent tax, except of course to pay over to the Government pronto. But there is a great fear that it will discourage both attendance and betting at the tracks because the horse player will now find 15 per cent deducted fro mthe betting pool before the pay-off starts.

In Chicago, the combined take of the tracks and the State is 10 per cent—8 per cent to the tracks and 2 per cent to the State. The tracks don't know whether to cut their own percentage by one or two points, or to reduce purses in an attempt to offset the predicted loss of play. They're afraid of what happened in Florida last year.

All of a sudden the State of Florida upped its take from the Miami tricks and only 85 per cent of the money bet in the pools came back to the betters. That loss of 15 per cent discouraged the professional betters who wanted a better gamble for their money, and the Florida mutuel handle fell off. Chicago tracks may not ask the customers to pay all of the freight of the new Federal tax. It won't be pure philantrophy, but in fear that the customers might stay away from the races.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 22.—The American League All Star team won the 1941 game and the Yanks blasted through the Dodgers to win the World Series. But the National League All Star team will rule a handy favorite when the cream of the crop collides at the Polo Ground two weeks from today.

CONSIDINE

The Americans have lost the services, either completely or partially, of Bob Feller, Hank Greenberg, Cecil Travis, Joe Cronin, Jimmy Foxx, Charley Keller and Thornton Lee. Some of these men are in the armed forces. Others have geen traded or are injured or are in slumps. Also marooned in slumps are Jie DiMaggio, Luke Appling and Sid Hudson. The all-around class now seems to be with the National, because of these American League losses. It is the first time in the 10-year history of the All-Star game that the National League appears able to field a decisively better team. The National League won three of the nine games so far in this interleague rivalry, but each was in the nature of an upset.

This time the National League will be able to present an infield plucked from Dolph Camilli, Billy Herman, Arky Vaughan, Johnny Mize, Billy Jurges, Eddie Miller and perhaps Stan Hack. The National League outfield will pack such punchers as Joe Medwick, Pete Reiser, Enos Slaughter, Bob Elliott, Danny Litwhiler, Mel Ott and the club will have Jimmy Foxx, now of the Cubs. Jimmy can play anywhere.

The National several times has had an edge, on paper, in pitching. This year the edge is more sharply defined. We suspect that Mort Cooper of the Cards, is the best pitcher in baseball. His five shutouts in nine victories attest to that. In addition to him, Leo Durocher, who will manage the National League team, can choose from among Claude Passeau, Whit Wyatt, Johnny Vander Meer, Howard Pollet, Curt Davis and Cliff Melton. Backing up these fingers are four National League catchers—Mickey Owen, Babe Phelps, Ernie Lombardi and Ray Lamanno—who are striving for the league batting championship.

It looks as if the American League will have to put Buddy Hassett, a National League cast-off, on first base. Joe Gordon and Bob Doerr will share the work at second. Lou Boudreau probably will man short, with Ken Keltner at his side.

There can be no complaint, of course, against an American League outfield of Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Jeff Heath, Stan Spence, Bob Johnson and perhaps Tom Henrich. But only Heath and Spence are better than their 1941 form. Williams and DiMaggio are off many points. Bill Dickey, who will be asked to do most of the American League catching, is not hitting the ball with 1941 fervor.

The American League pitching staff would appear to have places open for Ernie Bonham, Red Ruffing, Jim Bagby, Tommy Bridges, Eldon Auker and perhaps, Early Wynn. But Joe McCarthy, manager of the A. L. team, will need a southpaw. With Marius Russo and Thornton Lee ailing, and with Al Milnar and Al Smith too uncertain, McCarthy may have to choose Edgar Smith of the White Sox.

Edgar has the astonishing record of 1 victory against 11 defeats, but he appears to be the best southpaw in the league when one considers his earned run average and the abysmal batting support the White Sox have given him.

Revenue from the game this year will go into a ball and bat fund for soldiers, sailors, Marines and Coast Guardsmen. The contest should be a sell-out, with as much as $75,000 being realized. The charity isn't one over which we can create a literary lather, but it will have served a good enough purpose if it gives our boys a little healthy surcease from the grim realities of war.

'Whirly' Wins Aqueduct Race in Record Time

Calumet Star Bests Record Held By Market Wise, Pays $2.60 Mutuel

By the Associated Press

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., June 22.—In a finish that left the result in doubt pending the camera's evidence, Whirlaway had to set a new track record to win the Celt Purse by a margin of the velvet on his nose before 14,924 excited fans here today. Mrs. Parker Corning's Attention, which beat Mr. Longtail last season in the Arlington Classic, just failed to turn the trick again while in receipt of 5 pounds from Warren Wright's great stretch runner.

Two lengths behind the pair came Mrs. Payne Whitney's entry of Swing and Sway and The Rhymer, the pair finishing as named, heads apart. John C. Clark's Waller always was the trailer in this mile and a furlong overnight affair, an unexpectedly fine attraction as the meeting entered its final week.

Whirlaway, under 122 pounds, a lighter-than-usual package, covered the distance in 1:49 2/5, clipping three-fifths of a second from the track mark held by Market Wise. The Calumet comet was a $2.60-for-$2 favorite.

Picks Up $2275

Whirlaway added $2275 to his total earnings, which now stand at $380,836, or $56,894 short of Seabiscuit's world record for winnings. He was ridden by Veteran George Woolf, who had guided the son of Blenheim II to victory in the 1940 Walden at Pimlico.

Although Woolf had Whirly closer than usual in the early running, it did not look as if the prohibitive favorite would make the grade until his dying rally in the final strides. Many thought the colt would be beaten, an upset that would have added to such recent ones as the defeat of Alsab in the Belmont, Fairaris in the Shevlin and Shut Out in the Dwyer, all odds-on choices.

Rivals Run Again

The five Celt starters all are in Saturday's rich Brooklyn Handicap, in which the ailing Market Wise is not likely to go.

Whirlaway's record-breaking performance was made over a dull track, described as good. Swing and Sway set the pace to the stretch, where Attention assumed charge. The 6 furlongs were run in 1:13 and the mile in 1:37 2-5. Meanwhile, after a good start, Whirly had been kept fairly close in third position. He got through on the inside along the back stretch, but did not make up much ground until he had been brought to the outside for the run through the home lane. Attention, after disposing of Swing and Sway, held on well and seemed assured of victory until the last stride, where the Calumet colt dropped his nose in front.

Everett Upset by Greenberg in Net Final

Dizzy Finish Marks Clay Court Meet

Winner Attempts Default, Then Scores By 5–7, 7–5, 7–9, 7–5, 8–6; Coach Ired

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 22.—Seymour Greenburg, southpaw netster from Chicago, defeated Harris Everett of Jacksonville, Fla., 5-7, 7-5, 7-9, 7-5, 8-6, to win the national clay courts tennis championship today, but only after he had almost forfeited the match two games before the finish of the final match.

With the count at 6-all in the fifth set, Greenburg walked off the court on the advice of his coach, Paul Bennett of Northwestern University, in order to catch a train to New Orleans where he is entered in the national intercollegiate tennis tournament.

But this was a championship he wanted, so Northwestern's tennis captain scampered back on the court and won the next two games and the title. The champion then hustled under police escort to the municipal airport to catch a plane south.

Talbert-Reedy Win

William Talbert of Cincinnati and Bill Reedy, Beverly Hills, Calif., won the doubles championship by defeating Charles Mattman, Long Island, N. Y., and George Richards, Montebello, Calif., in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3.

The gruelling five-set singles final consumed about four hours. The players split the first four sets with Everett, captain of the University of North Carolina's net squad, taking the first and third sets.

Everett got hot in the final set, taking a quick 3—2 lead on his own service. He then broke through Greenburg's service for a 4—2 lead and increased it 5—2 on his own service.

Here it was that the plucky Greenburg plunged into an all-over the court game in an effort to close the gap. His shots demoralized the careful strategy of Everett, who up to that time had been bounding them back from the net, holding Greenburg, for the most part, back of the baseline.

Before Everett could check the Illinois State champion the count was knotted at five games apiece. Each won one game to make it six-all. Then came the unusual incident of the forfeit.

It was learned later that Bennett had received word from Emmett Pare, coach of Tulane university and tournament manager of the intercollegiate meet, which got under way today, that the players at the national clay courts had until 2 o'clock (Central War Time) to report or be defaulted.

But Greenburg stayed on and in the anticlimax quickly copped the next two games and the title. Bennett already had left for the train.

Everett also is scheduled to play at New Orleans, where he is ranked No. 5, just below Greenburg.

Yankees Still Losing: Now It's to Toledo

By the Associated Press

Toledo, June 22.—The current slump of the New York Yankees extended into an exhibition game today as the Toledo Mudhens of the American Association trounced the world champions, 5 to 1.

Fred Sanford, a young right-hander, pitched the whole route for Toledo, yielding nine hits and keeping the Yanks shut out till the ninth, when Buddy Hassett and Tom Henrich hit doubles. The champs hit into four double plays.

Johnny Lindell was the only one of the numerous pitching staff of the Yanks who saw service, and he was rapped for 11 hits, including 3 singles by Shortstop Mark Christman and a triple and double by First Baseman Chuck Stevens.

Clo Shans, Los Angeles Negro, scored a decision over Billy Speary, Naticoke, Pa. Jimmy Braddock refereed the bout.

Louis Leaves For Training At Fort Riley

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—Corpl. Joe Louis entrained tonight for an indefinite period of basic military training at the Cavalry Replacement Center, Fort Riely, Kans.

Traveling alone, the heavyweight champion will not reach his destisation until Wednesday afternoon.

Reminded by reporters that this was the fifth anniversary of his triumph over James J. Braddock in the battle for the ring's most prized possession Louis replied, "Yeah, but I got my biggest thrill the day I enlisted in the Army."

Louis said that Army officials had not told him how long he would remain in Fort Riley to complete his original Army schooling and "I didn't ask no questions."

The champion enlisted on January 14, but the customary basic training period of 13 weeks was stretched over more than five months to permit his appearances at various benefits.

Bums, Organ Hater Divide Court Honors

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—That man with the soft voice and gentle manners proved too much for the rowdy Brooklyn Dodgers again today. They divided honors in court.

The mild man is J. Reid Spencer, 70, a musician who lives three blocks from Ebbetts Field, and objects to the loud noise the Dodgers victory calliope makes.

A week ago Spencer went to court to have the calliope removed so that he could take his afternoon nap in peace.

Asserting he needed quiet because of a cardiac condition, Spencer complained that "I have been misunderstood by neighbors and others. They brand me as a man who wants to stop baseball entirely. This, of course, is absurd. I only ask that the instrument be further toned down."

To this request, the Dodgers representative agreed.

Three Odd Distance Track Marks Broken

Rice, Dodds, MacMitchell Set New Records In Passaic Meet; Blozis' Mark Not Allowed

By the Associated Press

Passaic, N. J., June 22.—Some of the Nation's topnotch track and field athletes went out tonight to break a bunch of little sought after world records, wiped three of them off the books and tied another.

In a twilight meet at Passaic School Stadium that ended in almost complete darkness, 5000 rather dampened spectators saw record-shattering performances by Greg Rice of the New York A. C., Gil Dodds of the Boston A. A., and Les MacMitchell, competing for the Ohrbach A. A. of Newark.

Three National A. A. U. relay championships were decided but none produced new marks. In fact, the 2900-meter medley race became a one-team race when the teams of the Ohrbach A. A. and Southern California were scratched. The New York A. C. runners completed the event in 7:50.8, far off the world's record of 7:07.7.

A N. Y. A. C. team also captured the 400-meter relay in the slow time of 43 seconds, finishing ahead of the A and B teams of the Olympic Club of San Francisco.

The 1600-meter relay national championship went to the Wayne University quartet of Detroit in the average time of 3:18.7. Second was the New York A. C. and third, Northeastern University.

Dodds, national indoor mile and outdoor 1500-meter champion, covered the mile and three-quarters distance in 8 minutes flat to wipe out the old mark of 8:18.2 set by W. D. Day on May 17, 1890.

Rice erased the record of the famous Finnish runner, Hannes Kolehmainen, in the odd distance of two

Bogged-Down Nats Start Chisox Series Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, June 22.—The Nats held their own today. No game. Tomorrow they open a three-game series with the White Sox at Comiskey Park in an attempt to move out of the league cellar.

The Nats have only two victories to show for their current Western trip of seven games. A hitting slump has gripped the entire club.

Early Wynn will go to the mound against the White Sox tomorrow, holding out some promise of a victory inasmuch as he held the Indians to seven hits in his last start and won.

Rigney Paces Trainers in 7-3 Edge on Chisox

By the Associated Press

Great Lakes, Ill., June 22.—Johnny Rigney pitched and batted the Great Lakes baseball team to a 7-to-3 victory over his former Chicago White Sox teammates today, clinching his own game in a big eighth-inning rally by hitting a home run with two on base.

It was the Sailors' twenty-sixth victory in their last 27 games and Rigney's fourth straight since his enlistment.

Great Lakes' five-run splurge in the eighth came at the expense of Pete Appleton, who had relieved Jake Wade in the sixth. Leading the Sailors' attack were Joe Grace and Chet Hajduk, each with three hits.

Caddie, Told 'To Take Pin,' Follows Order

The Prince Georges Club caddies may not be up on their golf slang but they are obedient—to say the least.

A foursome was approaching the thirteenth green and a member told one of the young caddies to "take the pin," which, as you know means to stand at the flagstick and hold it as the golfers play their approach puts.

The youngster did so and as the golfers holed out they walked to the tee, paying no further attention to the caddy. They drove off the fourteenth and were walking down the fairway when one of them noticed the long bamboo pole with the "13" on the red flag sticking from the bag the caddy was carrying.

"What's the idea, boy," said his employer, "what are you doing with that pin?

"You told me to take it," the boy answered, "and I took it."

Worsham Has 68, Pairs With Johnson to Win Pro-Amateur

Coffey Ties Pro Sweeps With a 68

George Diffenbaugh, Borsari Shoot 65 For 2d in Pro-Am; Brobeck's 65 Wins

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Lewis Worsham, jr., the young Burning Tree pro who has been shooting consistent sub-70 golf over his home course in informal rounds, dipped into the 60s for the first time this season in competition yesterday to win the Pro-Amateur tournament with Edgie Johnson as a partner and tie in the pro sweeps at Bannockburn.

Worsham knocked two shots from par with an individual 68 and Johnson, a seven-handicapped player who is in the finals of the Prince Georges Club Championship, helped by four strokes for a winning best-ball 64 in the Pro-Amateur.

Rut Coffey, the stocky professional from the Fountain Head Club in Hagerstown, finished late and birdied the last hole to match Worsham's 68 in the pro sweepstakes event.

Brobeck Has 33

George K. Brobeck, ardent football follower from Congressional, was an easy winner in the amateur sweepstakes, posting a 44, 39—83, and deducting 18 handicap strokes for a net 65. Brobeck's game has improved several shots a round of late and his handicap is due for a slicing at his home club when the summer allowances are changed July 1.

Johnson, with nines of 36, 37—73, and minus seven handicap shots, was a second low net winner among the simon-pures, while low gross went to Bob Thompson of Prince Georges with 37, 38—75.

Second-place team in the pro-amateur was Kenwood's George Diffenbaugh and George Borsari with a best ball 65. Diffenbaugh had 71 and his partner helped six shots. The latter shot a 77 and played to a seven handicap, using several allowance strokes.

Five teams tied for third in the pro-am play and divided pin money. Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro, was in the deadlock with two partners, Maury Fitzgerald and Dr. R. A. Keilty, each with 66s while Diffenbaugh and Buster Mrstik had 66, Worsham and Earle Skinker and Baltimore's combination from Clifton Park, Pro John Bass and Joe Vaeth, all 68s.

Cox Puts Aplenty

Worsham and Coffey can thank Cox's putter that their 68s were low. Wiffy had a 71 despite the amateur trick of four-putting the third green, and three-putting two others.

Worsham played the back nine first and was 33 at the turn with just three pars. He had four birdies aided by some good putting and went over par twice, on the thirteenth, where he sliced a second shot out of bounds, and the sixteenth, where he missed a four-putter. He came to the ninth hole, his eighteenth, with par for a 67 but was well over the green in two and took five. Worsham has now won two pro-amateurs, the pro-lady and two pro sweeps this season.

Coffey, who has beaten the District pros over their home courses for years, took a liking to Bannockburn's par-five holes yesterday, drilling long second shots close on all four to post his four birdies of the day. His biggest mistake was on the seventh hole, where he three-putted from six feet while making too bold an attempt for a birdie.

Only Par Score Wins Medal For Home-Town Girl at Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 22.—Eleanor Dudley of Chicago, a broad-shouldered lass whose hobby is physical education, pounded the golf ball today like Babe Ruth used to hammer a baseball and recorded the day's only par over the Elmhurst Country Club.

Consequently she took medalist honors in the Women's Western Open Tournament and led the 32 entrants who will begin five days of match play tomorrow.

Known as the hardest hitter in women's golfing circles, the University of Alabama graduate compiled a 37—39—76 and no one in the field of 120 came nearer than two strokes to catching her.

Here's a glance at her day's doings over a heavy course: No. 3, par five: She hammered three terrific shots down the 517-yard fairway, placing the third just one foot from the pin. Her one putt gave her four.

No. 7 par three: She clipped a three-iron shot onto the green nicely and dropped her putt from 15 feet away for a two.

No. 10, par four; She was lost in the trees and took a bogey five.

No. 12, par four; Her second shot on a 348-yard fairway was over the green and she took a five.

No. 15, par six: On a 596-yard stretch of grass she covered the distance in three shots, chipped neatly within two feet of the pin and holed out for a birdie five. Second nine recapitulation—A one over par 39.

In a futile effort to catch the 1941 Women's Intercollegiate champion, Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga., shot a 41—37—78 and Phyllis Otto of Omaha, Nebr., turned in a 39—39—78 to tie for the runner-up position two strokes back of Miss Dudley.

Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., semifinalist in 1941, was next with 41—38—79, three over par.

Griff Luncheon Heads Give $116 To Navy Relief

At a final meeting of the Washington (D. C.) Citizens Committee in the offices of General Chairman Edward M. Curran at the District Court Building yesterday it was voted to turn over a check for $116 to the local drive for Navy Relief.

Herbert Guggenheim, treasurer of the committee, who assumed responsibility for between 100 and 200 tickets for the testimonal luncheon, presented Fred C. Spaulding, campaign director of the D. C. Citizens Committee for Navy Relief, with the check.

Curran, Ticket Committee Chairman J. Leighton Cornwell and other members unanimously voted the check to Navy Relief.

Northwestern Grad Leads College Golf

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., June 22.—Dick Haskell, bespectacled Northwestern University golfer who came up through the caddy ranks at Seattle, Wash., today led an incompleted field of 131 players in the first 18-hole qualifying round of the National Intercollegiate Tournament.

Haskell, a 26-year-old shotmaker who was graduated last Saturday after spending four years on a Chick Evans Scholarship—an award to outstanding caddies—carded a 34, 35—69 on the rolling Chain o' Lakes course, knocking three strokes from par and being the only one to break it.

Six were bunched at even par 71: Ray Brownell of Stanford, last year's runner-up, and his teammate George Traphagen; Earl Stewart of Louisiana State, the defending champion; Bob Beekman of Southern California; Eddie Johnston of Baltimore University and Charles "Babe" Lind of Denver University, the Rocky Mountain Conference champ.

An even 100 of the collegians were under 80 and observers believed that a 158 would be the limit mark for 64 qualifiers who will be determined at the completion of another 18-hole trip on the 36, 35—71 par links tomorrow.

Among the 72 shooters today was Burleigh Jacobs, University of Wisconsin captain and 1938 Western Amateur champ who set the Chain o' Lakes course record at that time with a 67.

The four-man Bradley Tech team of Peoria, Ill., which includes Bill Witzleb, the recent Western Junior titlist, arrived late and arranged to play only nine holes, completing the qualifying trials tomorrow with 27.

Grouped with 11 others at 74 was Grover Poole of Duke University, the Southern Intercollegiate champion, and at 76 were Jim McCarthy of Illinois, Big Ten kingpin, and Herb Rose of Minnesota, Sunday's driving champ.

Full Navy Team

For the first time in the tourney's 45-year-old history, a team from the Naval Academy at Annapolis is represented. About one-third of the field are seniors who plan to be in Uncle Sam's fighting forces within the next two months.

The Stanford team, last year's team champion, was leading that bracket after today's compilation of four of its members' lowest scores. The Pacific Coast Conference champions had an aggregate 291, followed by L. S. U. with 292, Northwestern with 293, Minnesota with 295 and Yale with 296. Tied at 304 were Michigan and Notre Dame with other team totals stretching out to Wisconsin's 319.

Six Birdies for Leader

Haskell's pace-setting 69 was booked together with six birdies, which required only 4 to 8 foot putts, and four bogies, two of which came when his shots wandered into traps and another when he three-putted.

Stewart, last year's medalist as well as winner, fired a 32 on the outgoing nine, but required a 39 to get back. The lowest back nine score was a 33 by Pittsburgh's Harry Simpson.

Boston Honors Paul Waner On Entry Into '3000 Class'

Collins, Last Player to Get 3000 Hits, Lauds Vet; Gifts Commemorate Feat

By the Associated Press

Boston, une 22.—Paul Waner, popular Boston Braves outfielder, was honored tonight by colleagues, baseball writers and fans on his entry into the select class of major leaguers who have made 3000 hits.

From President Bob Quinn down to the bat boy, the Braves were there to cheer the modest veteran, who said that he looked forward to many more seasons in the majors and only hoped that his son, Paul, jr., 13, "finds his baseball career as happy and fruitful as I have enjoyed."

Among those present was Eddie Collins, general manager of the Boston Red Sox, who was the sixth and last player before Waner to join the "3000 class."

Collins, praising Waner as a ball player who "always gave his best," said that many great hitters had not achieved such a goal and the only way to do it was as the little Boston outfielder did it—playing every day.

Waner, who is in his seventeenth season in the majors, was presented a traveling bag by fellow players, a desk set by the club management, and an engraved wrist watch by the Boston Chapter of the Baseball Writers Association.

Phelan to Attend Norfolk Fight Feature

Norfolk, Va., June 22 (AP).—Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Boxing Commission, will be among the out-of-town celebrities at the Fred Apostoli-Ken Overlin Navy relief benefit bout at Foreman Field here Friday night.

This will mark General Phelan's first appearance at an Old Dominion ring event. In addition to Phelan, boxing writers from New York, Baltimore and Washington are expected here for Tidewater's biggest fistic carnival in history.

Skinker Heads Small Field in D. C. Jr. Golf

Skinker, 20-year-old shotmaker from Columbia C. C., is the choice to succeed Tom Brandon, jr., the defending titlist from Columbia who may not defend the championship. Brandon must leave town today to enroll for his freshman year at Harvard University and will play only if able to make train connections in time.

Play will be over the 36-hole medal play route. Post entries will be accepted. The event is open to junior golfers under 21 years belonging to member clubs. The Albert MacKenzie trophy will go to the winner plus a gold medal while prizes will be awarded the runner-up and low scorer under 16 years of age. No entrance fee is required.

Artillery Ten Meets Surfmen Here Tonight

Swapping their antiaircraft guns for wagon tongue heavy artillery, the Timber Wolves of Battery H, Seventy-first Coast Artillery, will march on Washington Softball Stadium tonight bent on bringing down the powerful and speedy Surf Club softball team of Washington.

The game will start at 8:45 and go nine innings.

The soldiers won 30 straight games while stationed at Norfolk last year. This year they have made a runaway of the Navy Yard League race, while stationed in the ring of aircraft defenses which have been thrown around the nation's capital. Their record to date is 34 games won and only one lost.

Last night's bouble bill featuring FBI-Garvins Grill and Lansburg-Postoffice was broken up by rain.

Deadline for Md. Amateur Golf Entries Set Today

The Washington delegation will include a half-dozen shotmakers with title chances, including former champion M. Parker Nolan, Gene Pittman, Charles Malone, Earle Skinker, Dick Melvin and others in addition to Burnett. Spencer Overton, as usual, will lead the host city players.

Young Hurler Sought

A capable pitcher 17 or 18 years old is being sought by Cooley-McCullough Post nine of the American Legion League. He should call Coach Thompson at District 3080 immediately.

Medwick's Return to Stardom Realized After Chance Squib

JOE "DUCKY" MEDWICK

Novikoff's Crack Forces Notice Of Ducky's Fine Hitting Streak

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—There was a startling squib in one of the New York newspapers the other day when the Chicago Cubs were in town.

Lou Novikoff told a writer he thought he ought to be included in the National League's All-Star team. "I'm not the worst outfielder in the league," vouched the mad Russian. "I'm not the best either. The best is Joe Medwick."

This shows how times change, or perhaps how history repeats. Five years ago, when Muscles Medwick was ripping all kinds of pitching to shreds for the St. Louis Cardinals there was no doubt about his supremacy. But it has been a long time since anybody has thought of Medwick as the best, or even one of the best, players in the senior circuit. He hasn't even been called the best of his own team, the Brooklyn Dodgers.

On the basis of his play this season, however, Medwick deserves consideration again as the most valuable player in the league.

He has a batting average of .350 and a batting streak of 25 consecutive games. He needs to hit in his next eight games to tie the National League record set by Rogers Hornsby in 1922.

Today, an open date for all major league clubs, Medwick was six points behind his teammate, Pete Reiser, in the race for the circuit's batting championship, but for one day last week Medwick was on top and he may be again before the seasons ends—or when it ends.

Medwick's comeback was helped by the frequency with which opposing clubs used left-handed pitchers against the Brooklyn Dodgers in order to offset the champions' portside power—Dolph Camilli, Dixie Walker, Arky Vaughan and Reiser. This helped the right-handed Medwick until now he doesn't need any help.

Gene Tunney's Ex-Manager, Bagley, Dies

By the Associated Press

New York, June 22.—Frank (Doc) Bagley, manager of Gene Tunney's fistic fortunes immediately after the former heavyweight champion was mustered out of the Marines at the close of World War I, has lost his last battle.

He sold Tunney's contract for $3000 to Bill Gibson before the former Marine even became the light-heavyweight champion. Despite the sale, the two remained friends.

Bagley also managed Willie Jackson, a lightweight puncher during the era of Johnny Dundee and Lew Tendler.

Indoor Sports Card for Women Tomorrow at 7:30

An addition to the D. C. Recreation Department's program of indoor sports for women was made yesterday when Maude Parker, activities director, announced a regular Wednesday evening of mixed games would be inaugurated tomorrow night at Central High gym. Action will last from 7:30 to 10 p. m.

Dorothy Kelso, formerly of the Department of Playgrounds, will supervise the program which will include shuffleboard, paddle tennis, badminton and volleyball.

Also on the department's calendar for women is instruction in tennis, listed for Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 5 to 7 p. m., and classes in physical education, tap dancing and the modern dance on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 10 p. m. Thomson, Central and Roosevelt Community Centers are the scene of most of the programs.

Did You Forget? Redskins Open In Just 83 Days

Full preparations for the coming football campaign are under way at the Washington Redskins headquarters these days. Season ticket sales are booming, Assistant Coach Turk Edwards is busy interviewing new player prospects and Coach Ray Flaherty is out beating the brush of the Midwest and West Coast looking for halfbacks and linemen.

Meanwhile the entire details of the between-the-halves entertainment for the seven home games this year have been worked out, and the 100-piece marching band, under its new leader Don. P. McAdoo, will hold its first weekly rehearsal at Griffith Stadium tomorrow (Wednesday) night at 7:30.

Despite the heat and humidity, the Redskins' management announces that it is now 90 days until the opening National League contest against the Pittsburgh Steelers here on September 20. This, naturally, leaves only 83 days until the exhibition game slated against the Chicago Bears at the Stadium, Sunday, September 13.

Ida Time Takes Charles Town Feature Under Jockey Scocca

First Ride Since Spill Earns Edge

Tensleep Second To $8 Shot; Photo Decides Victor; Remolee Wins

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 22.—Getting her verdict via the camera, W. B. Casilear's Ida Time nosed out John C. Ellis' Tensleep in the seventh race, best offering on the program that started the second week of Charles Town's victory meeting. Third money in the field of eight operating at about 6 furlongs, went to Mrs. C. V. Pugh's Bleak Heights.

Jockey Danny Scocca, Washington boy, was aboard Ida Time and was riding for the first time since his spill here more than two weeks ago. Scocca held Ida Time together in the final drive and the 4-year-old filly barely lasted ahead of the driving Tensleep. Ida Time paid an $8 mutuel and was clocked in 1.21 over a muddy track. A downpour this morning riddled the program but a better-than-average Monday crowd participated in the sport.

Scocca showed that he had not lost any of his riding skill by sending Ida Time to the top between horses leaving the clubhouse turn. The filly opened a good lead on Navigation and Blue Melody. Entering the stretch, Ida Time had what seemed to be a safe lead. Scocca went to the whip however and it was well that he did. Al Bocson ducked Tensleep to the inside and this one came with a closing rush that just missed taking the chief money.

J. E. Simmons' Remolee won the fifth event by half of a city block, despite interference from J. Pedrosa's Rom which finished second and ahead of the veteran Bogert. Remolee was an even money favorite. Jockey Al Bocson sent the son of Mowlee to the inside of Rom at the far turn and was shut off temporarily. He went up again, however, got through and Remolee went on to win with the greatest of ease.

The stewards heard the report of the patrol judge and suspended Jockey E. Fort for five days.

The daily double paid $36.60. Charmful was the winner of the second race by five lengths under a good ride by Jockey George Acosta. War Target and Vera M were second nad third to this $9 shot. In the third race, Jean C overtook the pacemaking Manny B and went on to lead Macie Margaret and Crimson Lancer to the wire. Jean C racing for A. A. Gray, paid $8.20.

At The Post

Dear Al:

The first week of the "victory meeting" here resulted in the purchasing of $15,841 in war bonds and stamps. This is through the payment of jockeys, owners and employes with bonds and stamps. Don't confuse this figure with the money being raised for Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities. Little Charles Town is going to make some of the big tracks sit up and take notice when the figures are added up after July 4. The feature race here tomorrow will be the Russ Hodges, named for the popular and efficient boss of WOL's sports page program. I hope to get Racing Secretary Freddie Burton to make it the fifth event so we can get it on the air. Hodges has broken down completely, for he has donated a $25 war bond for the winning owner. Jockey Martin Bletzacker couldn't get suitable mounts, so he took the day off yesterday. He is the champion around here, having ridden 37 winners since the racing began here in Jefferson County. Sammy Palumbo has 26, Clarence Wright 25, Willie Dufford 20 and Buddy Root 20. Jockey W. McDonald was uninjured in that spill last Saturday and will be up as soon as he can get a mount. A heavy rainstorm yesterday morning deluged Race Secretary Burton with requests for scratches. He shifted the program around in order to accommodate as many horsemen as possible. Frank Smith of the mutuel department left for Arlington Park. Mrs. D. F. Lloyd reports the death of the plater Grand Canyon. Dan Chamlin now tops the trainers at the meeting with 15 winners, one more than Vernon Arthur. Friend Galt Davis returned from a business trip to the Middle West. Gordon Furr shipped in the sprinter Lady Carrot and she will campaign for the remainder of the meeting. H. B. Lodge brought in a plater named Beans. Looks like the horsemen are going in for vegetables. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—MARVELOUS was off very slowly last out and ran a creditable race. With a better start today I look for this one to take it all. SOME WHERE has been threatening and will be a factor. GRANNY CAKE is bred excellently.

Second race—HIGH AIM seems the best of those gathered for this sprint despite the 116-pound assignment. Needs only the right ride. FALCONIER is dangerous at the weight. ADHELMAR to take care of the others.

Third race—STAR CANTER deserves the call in this field. Will appreciate the off track. VAN-TRYST never was better and will be dangerous. MOST ALERT may be in the show position.

Fourth race—CITY JUDGE gets my call over this field. He has been rested and is ready for the best. BATTLE LINE'S last was a good effort. FLYING CENTAUR for the show end.

Fifth race—TIME HER was knocking at the door last out and seems capable of turning back these. RED WINGS is something of a champion at this short route but I'm still taking TIME HER. PANDORAMINT will be right there.

Sixth race — CUSHLAMACREE was winning in that previous effort, then she ran to the outside fence and had to be taken up. This one is a natural choice in this affair. HONEY PLAY won early in the meeting and belongs close. FRELAN is a possibility at a price.

Seventh race—HAREBELL just missed last out and should take care of this field. SHAMBLES and CANDLE ENDS are better than the others.

Eighth race—TRYSAK is a doubtful starter but belongs on top if he goes postward. YANKEE LAD breaks from the No. 1 post position and is a threat. PETEE LAD for the minor money.

Substitute race—If this event is used I'll take JACK FLY, NOT ALONE and SURPRISE BOX.

Best—TIME HER.

Suffolk 'Plater' Race Goes to Purcellville

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 22.—Never worse than second at any time, James C. Braswell's Purcellville, favorite in a nine-horse field, scored by a half length today in the $1300 Colonial, a mile-and-70-yard test for platers, at Suffolk Downs.

A. G. Tarn's Triplane ran second, a head in front of Walter G. McCarty's Light Reigh. Another length back in fourth place was Burgoo Trail, owned by Coughlin & Perry.

The winner ran the distance in 1:44 3-5 and paid $8.60, $4.20 and $3.40. Triplane returned $4.20 and $3.20 and Light Reigh $5.80.

½-Mile Racing In Maryland Still Planned

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 22.—Half-mile racing in Maryland will be run as usual this year, beginning July 7 at Hagerstown, unless there is a direct order from the Federal Government banning the sport, Chairman Frank Small, jr., of the State Racing Commission said today.

Small said he saw no reason to alter the plans of the five minor track associations for racing totaling 50 days.

The Office of Defense Transportation recently requested that all fairs in the country be cancelled.

"We have had no word from anyone in authority indicating that half-mile racing is to be halted," Small said. "As a matter of fact, as far as I can ascertain, there hasn't been anything official about calling off the fairs, and I know that many groups in Maryland are opposed to dropping the fairs."

The State has half-mile courses at Hagerstown, Cumberland, Marlboro and Timonium, and a three-quarter mile track at Bel Air.

Naiman Photo Nine Wins Departmental First Half Crown

N. Y. Lunch Beaten, 8-1; Hunt Hurls

McIntyre Pounded In Big Six Run Inning; Champions Won 9 and Lost 3

In the final game of the section, Naiman Photo nine yesterday captured the Departmental League first-half crown when it trounced New York Lunch, 8-1, in a five-inning clash on the Ellipse. A six-run uprising in the fourth inning made the victory possible, leaving Naiman with a record of nine won and three lost in the half.

Max Hunt, former Maryland U. hurler, handed out seven safeties during the game to beat out the Lunchmen's Lefty McIntyre. The latter allowed ten hits, including a double by Outfielder Rados.

During the Photo team's big inning McIntyre was shelled for five straight singles. In retaliation, however, the veteran southpaw slammed two hits in two times at bat.

Today the second-half opener on the South Ellipse will send New York Avenue against Marine Corps Headquarters, starting at 5:30.

Virginia Hunters Organize Tonight For Defense

Tonight, Virginia's first company of "minute men" will be organized at a meeting of the citizens of Alexandria, to be held in the auditorium of Virginia Public Service Building at 8 o'clock.

This organization, to be officially known as the Virginia Reserve Militia, will be composed almost entirely of licensed hunters and fishermen who own their own firearms. Companies of reserve militia are to be formed throughout the State, under a plan proposed by the Governor of Virginia.

In the event of attempted parachute invasion, local residents who have been organized and instructed can assemble to go into action immediately. Also local persons are more apt to detect the presence of strangers or suspicious persons near and around such strategic points as railroads, bridges, etc.

Dogs . . .

—By George Berner

Regardless of how much or how often we write about feeding the dog, it seems we never will get through answering questions about it. Neither, it seems, will we ever get through some of the skulls of the folks who are feeding (?) dogs. Feeding a dog is just about as simple as anything one can do, yet, some folks insist on making it a major chore. Let's look at some of the wrong ways to feed and how much easier and often cheaper, it is to feed correctly.

BERNER

We visited some friends last week who have two Scotties. To feed these two little dogs the lady of the house maintains a perpetual pot on the stove and into it she puts whatever leftovers there are from the table and any meat trimmings or vegetable cleanings she may have from time to time. The whole conglomeration seems to us to be a more or less high grade of garbage. Certainly it's a soft semisoupy mess, containing everything from baked beans to corned beef and cabbage. She cannot tell, of course, how much of anything the dogs are getting but feels perfectly confident that they are well nourished inasmuch as everything she eats is in the pot. She doesn't seem to be able to get into her beautiful head that the dog is not equipped to eat such food.

Probably the most popular method of feeding the dog is to open a can. Thank heaven this method is fast going out of style due to priorities on cans and we predict that we will have healthier dogs, certainly we will have a great deal less eczema. We don't mean by this to infer that canned dog foods aren't good for dogs, some of them are okay but in our humble opinion there are much better and much cheaper ways of feeding.

Table scraps have been standerd food for dogs for generations and they are perfectly okay if just a little care is used in their selection and too, if there are enough of them. Bread and potatoes must be excluded from scraps fed to the dog. We have had many a long and strong argument about this over a period of years but regardless of opinions to the contrary we know from tests we have made with our own dogs that bread and potatoes just don't get along with dogs. Nearly anything else may be fed providing it is not highly flavored. Feed your table scraps but don't rely on them entirely unless you have enough to fill the dog up at each feeding.

Probably the silliest method of feeding although not the most harmful is the practice of buying choice cuts of meat and mixing it with assorted cooked vegetables, etc. We know of several dog owners that do just this and one or two who insist that their little darlings will eat nothing but the white meat of chicken. Now can you feature that? In the first place dogs don't need good cuts of meat, the cheapest is just as good for them as the best, and secondly, dogs do not need vegetables. You'll hear arguments on this subject but have you ever seen a dog raid a vegetable garden? If the dog was intended to graze he would have been equipped insofar as teeth and jaw construction are concerned, by nature for that joo.

Ice Palace Girls Top Clarendon Rollers

Lucile Young's Ice Palace bowling team defeated the Clarendon girls, 1558 to 1533, last night with Julia Young supplying the punch in the shape of a 131 single and 332 set. Lucile Young's 120-322 and 308s by both Nell Huff and Sydney King were next highs. Lillian Copeland had a 332 set to spark the Clarendon attack with Anna Dau's 125-326 following.

2 More Boxers Volunteer for Drew Benefit

Two more boxers yesterday volunteered their services for next Monday night's boxing show which Promoter Joe Turner will stage at Griffith Stadium for the benefit of the family of the late Preston Drew, Golden Gloves and professional boxer, who succumbed last Tuesday night following injuries received in a six-round match with Lew Hanbury.

The latest are Jabbo Kenner, the 6-foot 6-inch, 220-pound colored giant, who was stopped by Joe Baksi on last Monday's show in the feature bout, and Leon Kennedy, a former Pennsylvania amateur fighter who also fought on the card.

The Petro brothers, Danny and Charley, will make their pro debuts on the Monday benefit show to help out "a buddy." The Petros have sterling records in amateur and Golden Gloves competition.

Turner now is casting about for opponents for Gus Mirman, the "butcher boy;" Georgie Parks, the hard-hitting Greensboro colored battler who stopped Mirman in two heats in a violent upset; Roy Dunn, winner last Monday; Otis Harris, well-known colored scrapper, and Eddie Kane, also a Golden Gloves product.

The promoter would like to have one feature bout, but if he is not successful will have a bang-up club show.

Senate Votes Bill to Merge Wire Firms

By the Associated Press

The Senate approved, yesterday, legislation which would permit merger of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies.

Senator McFarland (Democrat) of Arizona, said the measure authorizing the voluntary consolidation and merger of all domestic telegraph operations was "soundly in the public interest."

The Senator asserted that the Postal Telegraph Co. was "going in the hole" at a rate of $300,000 monthly, while Western Union suffered "great losses in recent years." He said that merger should assure an efficient telegraph communication system badly needed for the war effort.

McFarland, author of the bill which goes to the House, asserted that the merger would release large amounts of critical materials to the War Department.

For example, he said, Western Union immediately could release 6200 teletype printers and Postal, 1200.

"Obviously," he added, "The Postal cannot survive without Government subsidy. The merger will provide a much more efficient communications system."

Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, asked how a merger could make any great savings possible. McFarland replied that savings could be expected because of "a great turnover of business under war conditions."

Illusory Tax

Campaign to Liberalize Capital Gains And Loss Tax Pushed Hard in Congress

This is the first in a series of articles reviewing the bitter battle to revise the capital gains and loss tax, the so-called "illusory tax" or the "Treasury's pot of gold at the end of the rainbow." The tax, one of the least productive of revenue, has led other permanent levies in volume of litigation and difficulty of administration.

In the field of taxation no phase has been the subject of greater controversy than the treatment to be accorded capital gains and losses. Volumes of testimony have been recorded in Congressional committee hearings and the campaign to win liberalization of the capital gains and loss tax still is being pushed hard.

Hearings on income taxes, excise taxes and sales taxes designed to raise billions of dollars naturally grab the headlines. The complex and technical discussions on capital gains revision seldom find their way into crowded newspapers.

Yet, Section 117 of the Internal Revenue Code (the capital gains and loss section) is far-reaching. It affects every investor and every property owner.

Just what is a capital gain or capital loss? To answer that it is necessary to define a capital asset. In a broad sense, capital assets probably include all property in which money is invested. The accountant, the economist and the lawyer probably would define the term somewhat differently. However, for tax purposes capital assets must be defined in a more or less arbitrary manner.

Since 1934, the definition of capital assets has been changed, primarily because the system of taxing capital gains and losses has been changed. The present definition as contained in the existing law is as follows:

"For the purpose of this title, 'capital assets' means property held by the taxpayer (whether or not connected with his trade or business) but does not include stock in trade of the taxpayer or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business."

Here are a few examples, according to Lovell H. Parker of Washington, a well-known tax authority.

A share of U. S. Steel stock in the hands of an ordinary individual or corporation is a capital asset. A share of U. S. Steel stock in the hands of a dealer in securities may not be a capital asset.

A diamond ring is a capital asset in the hands of the ordinary person. A diamond ring is not a capital asset in the hands of a jewelry store.

Now comes the definition of capital gains and losses. Here one faces various conceptions. Some may contend there is a capital gain or loss by mere appreciation or depreciation in value. However, for tax purposes capital gain or loss is recognized only when such gain or loss is REALIZED by the sale or exchange of the capital asset.

It long has been contended, and vociferously, that capital gains are for the most part fictitious. This can be illustrated by the following case:

A Government employe bought a home in 1933 for $7000. In 1942 his department was moved out of Washington and he sold the house for $12,000. He then purchased another home in the city to which he moved for $12,000. This new home at today's prices was the equivalent of the old home purchased for $7000. For tax purposes under the present act a gain is recognized of $5000 of which $2500 is to be taken into account in computing net income; actually he was no better off as a result of the transaction.

The vagaries of this form of taxation could be told in hundreds of like cases.

Under the Revenue Act of 1938, provisions of which currently are in force, a distinction is made between so-called long term and short term capital gains and losses. Short term gains and losses are those resulting from the sales of capital assets held not more than 18 months, and long term gains and losses are those resulting from the sale of capital assets held for more than 18 months.

Short term capital gains are taxed the same as ordinary income, and short term losses may be used to offset short term gains with the right to carry forward an excess to the next year and set it off against short term gains.

As to long term gains and losses in the case of assets held between 18 and 24 months, the maximum effective rate of the tax is 20 per cent. In the case of assets held more than 24 months, the maximum effective rate is 15 per cent. Long term capital losses may be deducted from ordinary income in such manner that the tax benefit to the taxpayer will amount to 20 per cent in the case of "18 to 24 months' losses" and 15 per cent in the case of "over two-year losses."

The foregoing are the condensed provisions relating to individuals. The present law relating to corporations, which was passed in 1938 and amended in 1939, makes the same distinction between short term and long term capital gains and losses as in the case of individuals. Capital gains, both short term and long term, are taxed as ordinary income. Short term capital losses are deductible only from short term capital gains with the right to carry over net losses to the following year, and long term capital losses are deductible in full from any income of the corporation.

On January 12, 1942, Representative Patrick J. Boland (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, introduced in the House a bill (H. R. 6358) to amend the capital gains and losses provisions of the present law. Representative Boland since has died. Briefly, this bill provides that in the case of both individuals and corporations—

1. Capital gains and losses shall be segrated from other income.
2. Capital losses shall be offset against capital gains.
3. The distinction between short term and long term capital gains and losses shall be abolished and the holding period shall be ignored.
4. Net capital losses may be carried forward two years.
5. Net capital gains shall be taxed at a flat rate of 10 per cent.

Tomorrow—Terms of the Treasury's counter proposal for revision of the capital gains and loss tax as contrasted with the Boland bill provisions.

'Contingency' Funds Set Up By Many Firms

By Frank MacMillen
Wide World Business Writer

New York, June 22.—With enough figures in to give an accurate outline of the drop-off in corporate profits in the first quarter of this year, the main factors in the decline are becoming clearer—and the blame lies by no means wholly with increased taxes.

War has brought a host of other detrimental factors to bear on profit-and-loss accounts which in the initial three months of the year showed the first drop in two years or more.

A fair indication of the extent of profit decline is furnished by the New York Stock Exchange's compilation of 481 companies whose stocks are listed in the market. Their net profit, even though it aggregated the enormous sum of $561,000,000, was 14.3 per cent below the first quarter of 1941.

In addition to much higher taxes, a conspicuous item in many income accounts was the large amount deducted by many corporations for "contingencies" arising largely out of war conditions.

Net profits, of which stockholders get their dividends, are calculated after these contingency deducations.

Dividend Protection

Hidden under the accountants' technical term, contingency reserves, this simply means money set away for forseeable or partly estimable losses or expenditures at a later date, which would have been charged against current earnings if managements had known exactly how much to charge.

But while contingency money is not credited on the books as current profit, and so is not available now for paying dividends, investment experts pointed out that it tends to protect such payments to shareholders later when the war has passed and plants must be readjusted to normal output.

This insurance money, as it might be called, is being laid by for such diverse risks as compensation against a drop in prices after the war which might catch a company stocked up with high priced goods; against plants, busy with war work now, which may have reduced or may be of no usefulness in peacetime; against such hard-to-estimate factors as unusual wear on machinery from clock-around operation; damage to machinery by inexperienced workers; deferred maintenance and repairs because of pressure of work; and many others which will come to mind readily.

The total of this form of protection against future loss or expenditure cannot be measured accurately, but one authority says it has run into the hnudreds of million dollars in the past 18 months.

Nearly Equals Net Profit

A study of recent annual and quarterly corporation reports has revealed a few companies with unusual war problems which have set aside nearly as much in contingency insurance as has been credited to the stockholders as net profit.

Even where the deductions have been smaller, they have often amounted to from 5 to 50 per cent of the amount reported as net profit.

Besides the bulwark which this growing pile of funds provides to insure dividends which might be endangered in readjustment to peacetime work, it means two other important things, experts pointed out:

1. The security holders have literally bought insurance against having on their hands run-down worn-out or obsolete plants after the war.

2. A reservoir of corporation spending money is being built up which will help business and employment as it is spent in the readjustment period.

Hotels Seen Hit If Conventions Are Curtailed

By Wide World Features

New York, June 22.—Hotels will be hit in their pocketbooks if Americans abide by the Government request to defer conventions not closely tied into the war effort.

Conventions have grown from the happy frolic stage to the status of big business, with convention spending in this country estimated at 500 million dollars yearly, exclusive of transportation to and from home.

A recent survey by World Convention Dates, a publication, puts hotel revenue from conventions and convention delegates at $280,460,000 yearly.

But it is likely that Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, may have to get tougher and more explicit before he gets all the results desired in his request for:

"Deferment for the duration of all meetings, conventions and group tours" not closely related to the war effort.

ODT Request Assailed

The request already has been criticized by George K. Dahl, editor of World Convention Dates, who said:

"We fear very definitely that vague generalities of the Eastman statement may hamper the war effort by obstructing conferences and other gatherings which clearly come within the realm of his approval.

"A more forthright, and more effective, treatment would have been for Mr. Eastman to exercise his authority to set up a system of travel priorities."

Dahl said that of 20,323 conventions held yearly, 10,773 are conducted by trade associations and professional societies.

The convention business, growing in the past 20 years, has its own trade association, the International Association of Convention Bureaus, whose members include convention bureaus in 38 cities.

In addition to the national conventions, there are thousands of regional and State conventions. Last year there were more conventions than at any time in history.

Other Lines to Suffer

The I. A. C. B. has estimated the daily average expenditure of a conventioner at $14.76, about 27 per cent of each convention dollar going for hotel rooms and incidentals and the rest being spent as follows:

Restaurants, 24 per cent; department and other retail stores, 16 per cent; amusements, 9 per cent; liquor, 6 per cent; taxi transportation, 4 per cent; and theaters, 2 per cent.

Dahl said Eastman cannot "fairly" regard conferences and conventions generally as deterrents to the war effort until "an impartial agency sifts the sheep from the goats."

Eastman's office has repeatedly urged Americans to do as little nonessential traveling as possible, pointing out that the railroads are under an increasing strain to do their part in the war job.

Steel Rate Drops On Lack of Scrap

New York, June 22 (AP).—Lack of scrap forced steel mills this week to schedule operations at 98 per cent of the capacity compared with 98.3 per cent a week ago, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

The decline dropped potential production for the week to 1,664,600 net tons of ingots compared with 1,669,700 tons last week.

A month ago operations were at 99.6 per cent of capacity for an output of 1,691,800 net tons and a year ago 99.9 per cent of a slightly smaller capacity for 1,612,300 tons.

New York Cotton

New York, June 22 (AP).—Cotton futures prices climbed to around the best levels in two weeks today as traders saw in war news indications that the Government would continue for some time to need huge quantities of cotton cloth.

Prices were 40 cents to 70 cents a bale above Saturday's last at the close, slightly under the day's best levels.

Offerings were reported comparatively scarce. Further evening up of commitments in the July delivery, in advance of first notice day next Thursday, tended to restrict quotation changes in the spot month.

OPA to Issue New Ceilings Governing 'Retail Services'

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration will iusse shortly a complete new price ceiling regulation, effective July 1, for "retail services," including dry cleaning, shoe repair, laundry, tailoring, auto repair and garage service.

The universal price order, as originally announced in April, covered both goods and services and was made effective for services on July 1 but price officials have arrived at the conclusion, it was learned yesterday, that separate treatment for the service industries was desirable.

OPA officials declined to disclose details of the pending order but said that, in general, prices would be based on the March, 1942, levels prescribed by the universal price order. The new regulation is expected this week.

Professional services, such as those of doctors, dentists and lawyers, are exempted from price control by the general price regulations. So also are personal services not connected with commodities, such as barber and beauty shops.

By certain "self-executing" provisions of the new order, officials said, formulas will be provided for putting maximum prices on services of a seasonal nature. Dry cleaners, for instance, in many cases could not use the level of last March, when their business was mainly in handling woolen apparel, in computing price maximums for washable summer clothing.

The "self-executing" provisions, whatever they may turn out to be, will take care of such situations. It was indicated that the scheme involved some form of cost-plus-normal mark-up.

Darkening of War Picture Depresses Stocks; General List Retreats Fractions to 3 Points

New York, June 22.—Depressed mainly by the war news, the stock market today suffered one of its worst stumbles in the past several months although selling pressure was notable by its absence.

Prices slipped at the start as sentiment apparently was chilled by the collapse of Tobruk, the critical position of the Russians at Sevastopol and a slight darkening of the picture in the Pacific.

Steels, motors, mail orders, farm implements and aircrafts led the retreat for declines of fractions to 3 points. Extreme setbacks were reduced in many cases in the final hour. Rails, oils, coppers and utilities put up a fair show of resistance.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .5 of a point at 35.1. The composite was down about a full point from the June top. Transfers totaled 313,000 shares compared with 287,510 last Friday.

The lack of real liquidating urgency was encouraging to financial quarters who say in this further confirmation that securities were being held largely by investors rather than in-and-out traders. Lack of bids on the lightening of commitments here and there was thought to have accounted for the wider losses in numerous instances.

Prominent on the downside were United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgoery Ward, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Philip Morris and United States Gypsum. American Telephone more than halved an initial loss of better than a point.

Bonds were generally lower and commodities mixed. At Chicago wheat slipped ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent a bushel, corn was unchanged to off ¼ and hogs steady. Cotton was up 40 to 70 cents a bale.

Singer Manufacturing and Pittsburgh Plat Glass dropped more than 2 point each in the curb. Lesser casualties were New Jersey Zinc, Gulf Oil, Creole Petroleum, American Cyanamid and American Gas. Turnover here amounted to 42,660 shares versus 46,275 in the preceding full session.

Dealers Solicit Utility Investors To Exchange Issue

New York, June 22 (AP).—In the first move of its kind under the Securities Act, a group of more than 300 security dealers throughout the Nation today started a solicitation for exchange of National Light & Power Co. $6 preferred stock for the common stock of the Houston Lighting & Power Co.

Smith, Barney & Co., Lazard Freres & Co. and Blyth & Co. head the solicitation as "dealer managers."

The offer of exchange of securities is a step in the proposed dissolution of the National Power & Light Co. a holding company in the electric Bond and Share group. Houston Lighting & Power is a subsidiary of the former.

Demand Deposits Climb, but Time Savings Decline

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that demand bank deposits are about 8 per cent higher than a year ago.

Banks of 101 leading cities reported on June 17, that their demand deposits, excluding interbank and Government deposits, totaled $26,058,000,000, which was $2,186,000,000 larger than on the corresponding date in 1941.

In the same cities, however, the deposits, totaling $5,107,000,000, were 300 million dollars less than a year ago—apparently because many people now put their savings into war bonds rather than savings accounts.

Visible Grain Supply

New York, June 22 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels); wheat decreased 615,000; corn decreased 983,000; oats decreased 370,000; rye increased 5000, and barley decreased 152,000.

FPC 'Deflates' Niagara Power Project's Cost

By the Associated Press

A 20-year controversy over the cost of the Niagara Falls Power Co.'s big hydroelectric power development at Niagara Falls, N. Y., was terminated yesterday with announcement by the Federal Power Commission that it had determined the "actual legitimate cost" of the plant to be $24,680,680 as of March 2, 1921.

The commission disallowed $15,787,688 of the $44,453,868 book cost of the fixed capital in service on the 1921 license date and reserved for further consideration items totaling $3,985,500 representing the book costs of lands, interest and a flour mill purchase.

The actual cost of the project, known as Project No. 16, set by the commission, was less than half the $57,315,863 which the company claimed as the "fair value" of its property in applying for a license in 1920.

Writeups Claimed

The commission said that most of the amounts disallowed in determining the actual legitimate cost represented write ups placed on the books of the licensee's predecessor companies, Cliff Electrical Distributing Co., Hydraulic Power Co. of Niagara Falls and the Niagara Falls Power Co. which were consolidated into the present company by a special act of the New York Legislature in 1918.

A write up of $11,800,482 on the books of the Hydraulic Power Co. was characterized by the commission as a "flagrant example of outright inflation."

Three days after the Hydraulic Company was organized in 1910, the commission said, it absorbed the Hydraulic Power & Manufacturing Co., described as the original company of the Schoellkopf interests.

Book Cost Held Hoisted

"As the record clearly shows," the commission said, "the book cost of the Schoellkopf properties . . . was increased $11,800,482 in this merger without any pretense at arm's length bargaining, without a dollar of additional investment and without any change in the stockholders or the property."

The commission added that the new company issued $5,800 of securities for every $200 of stock of the original Schoellkopf company, an increase of 2800 per cent.

Under the terms of the order announced yesterday, $15,537,943 of the total amount disallowed, must be removed from the account books of the project and within 60 days placed in the earned surplus account of the company. The balance of $249,744 must be transferred to other accounts.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 22.—After tumbling more than a cent a bushel early in the session, wheat prices rallied slowly today to recover practically all the loss before the close.

The early break was blamed largely on war news which inspired accumulation of selling orders over the weekend. However, these orders were small and as soon as they were exhausted the market began its rally. Hedging sales were not in the volume many traders had expected since receipts in the harvest belt, while expanding, continued to lag behind a year ago.

Buying of professional dealers covering previous short sales and mills, possibly associated with limited flour sales to the Government, helped to rally wheat.

The close was ⅛ to ⅜ cent lower than Saturday; July, 1.18⅞@1.18¾; September, 1.21½@1.21¾. Other grains largely followed the trend of wheat, corn finishing unchanged to ¼ off; July, 86½@86⅝; September, 89⅛@89¼; oats, unchanged; rye, ¼ to ½ higher; soybeans, ⅜ lower to 1⅜ higher.

Funeral Set Today for G. H. Leonard

Services for Grady H. Leonard, 47, on leave of absence as superintendent of the Receiving Home for Children, will take place this afternoon at Chapel Hill, N. C., where he died Sunday following several months' illness.

LEONARD

Mr. Leonard applied for retirement from his position because of poor health last May and with his family moved from their home at 816 Potomac Avenue Southeast, to Chapel Hill.

Before he was appointed superintendent of the home in 1934, Mr. Leonard directed the placing and supervising of boys 15 to 20 years old as a social worker in the Child Welfare Division of the Board of Public Welfare. He had also had experience as building secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Durham, N. C., had organized boys' clubs in high schools and had worked on the Y. M. C. A. staff at the University of North Carolina, of which he was a graduate.

During World War I he spent two years in the Army and was formerly a member of the American Legion. He was a member of Alpha Chi Sigma fraternity and superintendent of religious education in the church school of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church in Washington.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mamie P. Leonard, and two daughters, Jane and Ann Leonard.

Mrs. McAneny's Rites Set in West

The body of Mrs. Florence E. McAneny, 77, who died Saturday at 2800 Woodley Road Northwest, where she had been making her home with her daughter, Miss Merle G. McAneny, will be taken to her former home in Los Angeles. Services will be held there Saturday.

Miss McAneny, who is administrative assistant to George E. Bergstrom, chief architect for "the Pentagon," the new War Department Office Building, will leave for California today.

Mrs. McAneny's late husband was with a mining firm in California where they made their home. She had been ill about four months. Miss McAneny was an only child.

Contract Bridge

A simple squeeze for seven no trump was developed on today's hand, played during the South Shore mixed-pair championship. Max Burnstine and Miss Helen Mayer, a Brooklyn pair, had the pleasure of bidding the slam against the eventual winners of the contest, Mrs. A. M. Sobel and Clagett Bowie of Baltimore.

With 12 top tricks Burnstine saw that he could win the thirteenth by a squeeze, provided one defender held both the long heart and the long club.

A diamond was opened, which he won with the queen: he cashed the king of diamonds and ran four spades and the diamond ace, discarding two low clubs from his hand. On the fourth spade Mrs. Sobel had to discard either a heart or a club. Knowing her situation to be hopeless, she threw a low club rather than a heart, which would make her plight obvious. Noting the club discard, declarer played two rounds of the suit catching the queen and jack, and claimed his thirteenth trick with dummy's club ten.

Had Mrs. Sobel discarded a heart, declarer would have taken four heart tricks for the same result.

Cecil Brown, a C. B. S. reporter who seems to have the faculty for getting around, has taken over the five-minute daily news spot at 8:55 p. m. which Elmer Davis filled so capably for three years until his appointment by President Roosevelt last week as Director of War Information.

Brown, whose stirring reports you have heard from Rome, Belgrade, Ankara, Cairo, Singapore, Sydney and points east, climaxed by his vivid eye-witness stories on the sinking of the British warships, the Repulse and the Prince of Wales, has been back in America for the past two months on a lecture tour.

"My tour of the United States convinces me that the people are avid for news and brought home to me the great responsibility of a reporter to give the people facts," Brown said on his return. "I know that if they are told the facts they may be trusted to determine what the situation is."

"Assignment to this news period on C. B. S. is not altogether a new job for me," Brown says. "After all, it means reporting the news objectively and accurately, and that is the aim of every reporter worth his salt. All my newspaper training has been pointed at that great goal."

Brown was born in New Brighton, Pa., 34 years ago and is a graduate of Ohio State University. His first job was for the United Press on the West Coast. Subsequently he worked for a Youngstown, Ohio, paper; then for C. B. S. in its publicity department; then for the I. N. S. in Rome and wound up by coming back to C. B. S. as Rome correspondent in 1939.

Agents' Jury Again Grills X-Ray's Editor

The special grand jury investigating Axis agents heard testimony yesterday by Court Asher, of Muncie, Ind., editor of the X-Ray, and Newton Jenkins of Chicago, said to have addressed numerous Nazi bund rallies.

Asher, whose newspaper was barred from the mails for sedition, was ordered last week to produce his business files and copies of the paper fo rthe last two years.

Jenkins is known as an associate of Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, antiwar agitator and authoress of "The Red Network," an "expose" of communism.

Meanwhile, William Griffin, publisher of the New York Enquirer, also had been summoned for appearance yesterday but failed to appear. His attorney notified the grand jury that he was ill in New York City.

Griffin, who testified before the grand jury last week, had reproduced in his paper a postcard which, it is charged, is seditious and has been traced to the imprisoned German agent, George Sylvester Viereck. Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court warned Griffin June 11 that he would be cited for contempt of court if he continued withholding information sought by the grand jury.

Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney of the Department of Justice said yesterday that the jurors would reconvene Friday.

Parity, Economy Issues Deadlock Agriculture Bill

The Agriculture appropriation bill last night remained deadlocked on farm parity and economy issues.

It was learned that a majority of House conferees failed to appear for a conference, and that no further attempt at agreement will be made before Thursday.

As the June 30 end of the fiscal year neared with the bill badly jammed, leaders were considering possible extension of current year appropriations to meet departmental costs until the deadlock can be broken.

The House conferees are insisting on their stand against below-parity sales of Government-owned commodities except in the case of deteriorated grain used for feed and industrial purposes. The Senate compromise, favored by the Administration, would permit sale of 125,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat for feed purposes at 85 per cent of the parity price for corn.

Abe Fortas Becomes Interior Undersecretary

Heinz to Make Parts to Pickle Enemy in Air

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 22.—Production of airplane parts from plastic-bonded plywood soon will be added to the vital wartime work of H. J. Heinz Co., it was announced today by H. J. Heinz 2d, president.

"Because our company believes that hastening victory is the first job of all industry, we long ago offered to the Government the adaptable facilities of our factories extending from coast to coast," Heinz said, "for in addition to producing considerable quantities of specially prepared rations for the United Nations armed forces and the 57 varieties for civilian consumption, we wish to make a direct contribution to the country's military effort.

"A thorough study of our factories revealed that some of the equipment was adaptable immediately to specialized work—particularly the manufacture of plywood aircraft parts. Specific details of the project cannot of course be disclosed because they are military secrets but large scale production soon will be realized. One of the company's machine shops already is operating nearly 100 per cent on subcontracts to assist in the output of war materials."

Boy, 15, Sentenced In Kidnap Case

Marquette, Mich., June 22 (AP).—Judge Frank Bell today sentenced Charles Ross Heath, 15, to 15 to 30 years in the Marquette branch prison on a charge he kidnaped 10-week-old Gloria Jean Nault.

Gloria Jean's body was found in a truck parked not far from the automobile in which her parents left her sleeping on the night of May 31 outside a tavern near Gwinn at which they were guests with friends. The child's skull was fractured and her body bruised.

The boy first pleaded not guilty, but today he changed his plea to guilty.

Limit on WAACs Doubled; 450 More Officers Needed

By International News Service

In order to meet the overwhelming demand for the services of the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, the War Department last night disclosed that the entire program would be doubled.

The number of officer candidates selected for training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa—originally fixed at 450—will be stepped up to twice that number and within the year the WAAC ranks will total 25,000.

Outgrowing the original blueprints calling for approximately 450 officer candidates and an eventual enrollment of around 13,500 women, including officers, the WAACs tonight emerged as a big league branch of the armed forces.

The 450 selected next week at a meeting of Director Oveta Culp Hobby with the corps area reviewing committees will be subsequently supplemented with another 450 or 500 officer candidates. Not later than May, 1943, the WAACs will be 25,000 strong—the top enlistment limit for the year put on the corps by President Roosevelt.

After the original 450 candidates have completed training at Fort Des Moines a like number will be called up from the thousands of applicants who passed examination in the May recruiting drive.

Enrollment of the rank and file of WAACs beginning in July will see the start of the general program of expansion. Each month thereafter the number enlisted will be increased until the corps is taking in privates at the rate of 800 weekly in October.

In order to train twice as many as originally planned, the officer candidate school at Fort DesMoines will be completely turned over to the WAAC cadettes.

The War Department last night approved the plan of Fort Des Moines commandant, Col. Don C. Faith, "which will utilize the full capacity of the fort as quickly as possible."

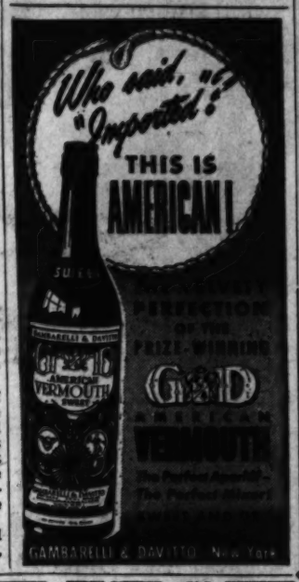

Senate Moves To Free Teachers From Hatch Act

All teachers would be free to take part in politics under a measure passed by the Senate yesterday and sent to the House.

Without a dissenting vote, Senators approved an amendment to the Hatch Act which would exempt teachers from political restrictions imposed on persons paid with Federal funds.

Senator Brown (Democrat) of Michigan told the Senate that there was no intention to ban political activity by public school teachers under the original Hatch Act but that rulings by the Civil Service Commission and Ohio and Minnesota authorities had applied the law to them.
